CENTRE COUNTY CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION JULY 25 & 26.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON

Delivered by Rev. T. Levan Bickle in the Reformed Church.

ON SUNDAY EVENING JUNE THE THIRD.

To the Class of 1900, Bellefonte High School—A Large Audience Listens to the Words of the Eloquent Young Divine.

GOOD ADVICE FOR YOUNG GRADUATES

The Reformed church was crowded to the doors Sunday evening to listen to the Baccalaureate sermon delivered by that eloquent young divine, Rev. Thomas Levan Bickle, to the class of 1900 Bellefonte High School. Every seat was taken and many were compelled to stand throughout the service.

The singing for the occasion was rendered by a quartette, Messrs. Shuey, Fisher, Lukenbach and Whippo,

We regret that space will not permit the publication of Rev. Bickle's sermon in full, for it contained many beautiful thoughts and words of good advice that cannot fail but be a power for good to those who heard them. It was certainly one of Rev. Bickle's best efforts and highly pleased those who listened to it.

Below we give a brief outline of the sermon:

The text was taken from the book of Amos, 7th chapter and 14th verse. "I was no prophet, neither was I a prophets son, but I was an herdsman and a dresser of scycamore trees; and the Lord said unto me, go prophesy unto my people, Israel."

The lesson that he taught was taken from the life of Amos, important because of three reasons, first because of circumstances and opportunities; second because of youth and humble origin and third because of way, youth and circumstances fitted together. Here followed a history of the life of Amos, his trials and vicissitudes, opportunities and final triumphs.

The lessons taught are many. Education is just this, a fitting of circumstances to life or vice versa with the word of admonition "Thus saith the Lord" or as Christ afterward more plainly said "I must do the will of Him that sent me."

The wise teacher will see this, first, examine the field; second examine the pupil; third graduate the pupil with this word of advice "The Lord takes you and sends you forth to prophesy."

The life work of Amos was ardous and opportunities few yet he was successful and God wrote his name in large letters on the scroll of history. He dared to climb the hill of Mt. Zion, poor, unannounced, unordained, unknown though he was, and speak for God. But not in conceit or self-pride of mind or muscle, but only in the name of his creator.

The application is clear and the moral is plain. Young women and men of the class of 1900, Bellefonte High school, what is your idea of life and of the careers you are about to make? If narrow, local and shallow, then wrong. God expects great and good things from you. The times plead for your young strength-to struggle for truth. Your country pleads for your young strength-to keep the flag unsullied and homes pure. The Kingdom of God pleads for your young strength to throw influence on the side of right.

Your influence is world wide. Your influence is eternity. wide. Again I ask you, what do you think of yourselves? Are you ashamed of your strength, home training, parentage, poverty and weakness of mind? If so then wrong again. You are rich in endowments and possibilities. Go out and conquer something. Go out and do something. Go out and be somebody.

Again I ask you, what do you think of God, and him whom God sent? What think you of his church and call to service? If you think God small, puny and uninteresting in your life, then again you are mistaken.

The God of heavens, the God of history, the God of miracles, the God of spiritual dominions, the God of sacrifice. The God who from His omnipotence came down to reach and redeem His own call you to be loyal, be true to his interests. Take Amos and Christ's motto with you through life "Thus saith the Lord."

—The club house of the Nittany Rod and Gun Club at Hecla Park was well patronized by Bellefonter's Memorial Day A large number of our local members of the club with friends enjoyed the comfort and quiet of that attractive retreat.

—The peace-maker may be blessed, but he usually finds himself in hot water.

DEMOCRACY'S DAY.

The Unterrified Have No Use for Robert M. Foster.

The Democratic county convention met in the Court house Tuesday at 12 o'clock. There was a large attendance of delegates very few absentees being noted.

Convention was called to order by county chairman J. Kennedy Johnson, who made a few remarks in opening prophesying victory for his party at the coming election. The call for the convention was read by the secretary John J. Bower, of Bellefonte, which was followed by roll call.

Dr. F. K. White, of Philipsburg, was made permanent chairman of the convention and on taking the chair thanked the delegates for the honor bestowed.

S. M. McDowell, of State College, and D. R. Wilson, of Howard, were made secretaries. G. W. Rumbarger, of Unionville, and D. R. Foreman were chosen tellers. W. F. Smith, of Penn Twp., was made reading clerk.

The next thing in order was the nominating of candidates for the Legislature. Robert M. Foster, of State College; J. Will Kepler, of Ferguson; Henry Wetzel, of Bellefonte, and John W. Conley, of Potter, were placed in nomination. The vote was as follows:

Kepler 58, Wetzel 80, Conley 9 and Foster 21. Kepler and Wetzel were therefore declared the nominees for the Legislature.

For jury commissioner Frederick Robb, of Liberty, and D. W. Harter, of Miles, were placed in nomination. The ballot resulted in the nomination of Robb by a vote of 59 to 25.

At this point Harry Fenlon, of Bellefonte, nominated J. K. P. Hall, of Elk county, for Congress, and offered a resolution naming S. M. Graham, of Philipsburg; R. M. Foster, of State College, and S. A. McQuistion, of Bellefonte, as conferees and instructed for Hall for Congress. Carried.

John J. Bower, of Bellefonte, was then elected by acclamation county chairman for the ensuing year. His opponent W. G. Runkle having withdrawn.

The resolutions were then read and adopted. They were of the usual order condemning Mr. McKinley's administration, endorsing Bryanism and declaring undying enmity to trusts. The state administration and ex-senator Quay were severely scored.

Hon. Fred Kurtz, of Centre Hall, offered a resolution which was adopted calling for the impeachment of Gov. Stone. It ran as follows:

WHEREAS by a recent opinion, unanimously pronounced by the Supreme Court of this Commonwealth, Wm. A. Stone, Governor of this State, has been guilty of a willful and flagrant violation of the fundamental law, by his veto of the resolutions for an amendment to the constitution providing for an honest registration and fair count of the votes; and

WHEREAS, the said Governor W. A. Stone, in appointing M. S. Quay to a seat in the United States Senate, by certificate in violation of the constitution as repeatedly declared by the United States Senate; and,

WHEREAS, the said Governor W. A. Stone has, by eminent legal authority, been adjudged guilty of a violation of the constitution, in that he has by veto cut down the appropriation to the school fund one million dollars, therefore Resolved, that we demand the impeachment of Gov. Wm. A. Stone by the next Legislature, as provided for in Art. 6, Sec. 3, of the Constitution of this Commonwealth.

Speeches were made by Senator Heinle and Hon. Fred Kurtz. A remarkable feature of the convention was the lack of enthusiasm displayed throughout.

Foster's Weather Forecast.

About date of this bulletin a low or warm wave will be not far from longitude of Dayton, Ohio, moving rapidly eastward and a high or cool wave will then be in longitude of Winnepeg, Fargo and San Antonia.

A low temperature wave will cross the west of Rockies country about 29, great central valleys 31, eastern states June 2, causing showers in many parts of the country.

First week in June will be uneventful in weather matters. Showers of rain will be fairly well distributed up to about June 7, at which time a ten days' drouth will attack the growing crops and give the speculators an opportunity. The drouth will cause a scare but it will be partly broken not far from 17.

Severe storms may be expected at any time from 10 to 20 and during this period hail will probably damage crops in localities most subject to that destructive agent.

A great rise in temperature will reach meridian 90 near June 17 and a great fall near 26; earlier west, later east. The drouth will occur during the rising and showers during the falling temperatures mentioned.

—Running to catch a train at Johnstown Thursday, Stephen H. Herdman, aged 40, dropped dead as he was about to mount a car, his body rolling down an embankment.

OUR BOROUGH FATHERS.

Held Their Regular Semi-Monthly Session of Council Monday Night.

THE MEETING PROVED A LONG ONE

If the Scale Works Locates on the Glass Works Meadow, Council Will Give Them Water Free From Taxation For Five Years

BILLS TO THE AMOUNT OF $1425.60

Town council met Monday evening at 7:30 with President Gerberich in the chair and the following members present: Walkey, Wetzel, Derstine, Knisely, Potter and Garrity.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Verbal communications were called for and D. F. Fortney Esq., was present and asked council to pass an ordinance prohibiting people from tying horses to trees. He asked it as a matter of police regulation.

Dr. A. W. Hafer asked that a grade be given the property owners on Reynolds Avenue on the North side so that they can repair their walks.

A communication was received from James Harris, Dr. Brockerhoff and John M. Dale setting forth the fact that the Standard Scale Works desire to move their plant from its present location, as they desire more room. They employ 100 men and have received flattering offers from towns near Pittsburg in which they were offered land free and a bonus to cover expense of moving plant. The above committee desiring to keep the Scale Works here have been trying to find a suitable location for them and have finally decided that the Glass Works meadow owned by T. A. Shoemaker is the most suited to the purpose. They therefore asked council to lay water pipes to this location and grant them water for drinking purposes free from taxation for five years. They were of the opinion that if council would grant this request the Scale Works would stay here.

The Central Railroad, F. P. Blair and the Centre Democrat refuse to sign the water contracts. The water committees were notified that they had it in their power to cut the water off. The same will be done at once.

The reports of the different committees were heard and nothing of particular importance was elicted except the report of the Finance committee which was as follows:

Bal. due Trea. May 7—		$1990.12
Boro Orders Paid.....	$913.77

Bal due Treasurer June 4, 1900		2977.14

The boro solicitor was asked to look up the matter of an ordinance prohibiting the tying of horses to trees and report at next meeting.

Mr. Potter moved seconded by Mr. Walkey that a grade be established on Reynolds Avenue in order that permanent pavements may be laid by the property owners on that street.

Mr. Knisely moved seconded by Mr. Potter that the request of the Scale Works committee that water free from taxes for five years be granted the Standard Scale Works providing they locate on Glass Works meadow. It was carried unanimously.

F. W. Crider offered to pay ½ the expense of paving Allegheny street with asphalt in front of the exchange from the Diamond to the crossing at Eagle block. The matter will be held under further consideration.

The crossing on Howard street from H. P. Harris residence to Mrs. Moore's residence will be relaid with brick. The crossing on Thomas street from Linn McGinley's residence to the Jared Harper property is to be repaired.

Complaint was made to council that the street sprinklers make the streets to muddy in some places and to dry in others. Referred to street committee to look into the matter.

The following bills were approved and ordered paid:

AUSTIN BREW RESIGNS.

On Account of Ill Health He Gives up Position as Assistant Post-Master.

It is with regret that we announce the resignation of Austin Brew, assistant postmaster at the Bellefonte office. For sometime past he has not been in the best of health and has taken several vacations with the hope that he might thereby gain strength to continue his duties. It was found however that the confinement made necessary by his position was to much for him, and so rather than impair his health permanently he resigned.

Mr. Brew has made a good official in every particular. Polite and gentlemanly on every occasion he won the respect and friendship of the patrons of the office to a high degree.

His successor has been selected in the person of mailing clerk, William S. Chambers, whose place in turn will be filled by George Bayard, son of Col. George A Bayard. Both of these young men are in every way worthy of the appointments conferred upon them and will no doubt prove excellent officials. Mr. Chambers duties as mailing clerk have given him an insight into the position and his promotion is a just reward for past efforts.

George Bayard's appointment as mailing clerk is an excellent one and one that will meet with approval from all. For quite a number of years he clerked in Parrish's drug store and he is well and favorably known to all our people.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

William P. Gates, of Rock Springs, Swallows Two Bottles of Laudanum.

Wm. P. Gates, aged 29 years, who is single and lives with his parents at Rock Springs, Centre county, attempted suicide about noon Saturday last by swallowing two bottles of laudanum. Dr. Howser was hurriedly summoned who took charge of the case and by the application of the proper remedies prevented the youngman from passing into a permanent slumber. Though his case seemed almost hopeless during Saturday afternoon and Sunday he is better to-day, and will likely recover.

The young man is the son of Wm. Gates Sr. A brother, Robt. M. Gates, who was employed as a railroader on the Tyrone divison, was killed on the 1st of June, 1893 while assisting in clearing up the Main circus wreck. Another brother, Roland Gates, was killed in the Harrisburg yard on the 18th of May last. It is said the shock occasioned by the death of Roland unbalanced the mind of William, and led him to the attempt upon his life. The young man served a term in Sheridan Troop which ended a few months before the Spanish war, and enlisting again upon the reorganization of the troop, was discharged only a couple months ago. He is a young man of quiet, unassuming disposition.

—The extensive lumber mills of James Curry & Sons, near Arrow, Somerset county, were destroyed by fire. Loss from $30,000 to $40,000, with $20,000 insurance.

—There is a young woman in Washington society who sells her wardrobe as soon as she finishes with it, and gives all that is obtained in this way to her favorite charity.

—The State Superintendent of Schools in Iowa says that the Iowa school teachers are paid lower salaries than in any other of the States of the Middle West, excepting Ohio.

—Thomas Muncey, aged 90 years, died the other day at his home in Little Creek, Del. He never saw a railroad train, never used tobacco and never drank liquor. Little Creek is not on a railroad line.

—Mrs. Roy Griffith, of Houtzdale, a bride of a month, died Saturday morning. Her maiden name was Bessie Knight, and she was a most attractive young woman, whose early death has cast a gloom over the community in which she lived.

—American dentists can, according to recent official reports find a good field of operation in Brazil. A knowledge of the country's language is of value and skilled experience in dentistry coupled with it is bound to lead to a road to fortune.

THE MEMORIAL SERMON.

Delivered by Rev. George Israel Brown, Sunday May 21, 1900.

IN St. JOHN'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

Before Gregg Post, No 95, Grand Army of the Republic—Many Beautiful Thoughts Eloquently Expressed.

AN ABLE EFFORT WELL DELIVERED.

"And it shall come to pass, when your children shall say unto you, 'what mean you by this service'; That ye shall say—Exodus XII:26 v. and also Deut. XXXII:V. 7:

"Remember the days of old. Ask thy father and he shall show thee."

It is in faithful remembrance that nations wax strong and valiant, that they keep the heritage of their past, that they find their safeguard for the future. It is the spirit of hard won battles in the bygone years that descends upon the youth of the coming times and makes them brave to do and to dare. It is because you showed them how in the sixties that the young men of the last two years have won their laurels and met their deaths, for which, from time to time, we are called upon to grieve, as even now this last week, has been another in a far off Manila hospital. It is in the spirit of remembrance too, that God asks us to worship him, remembrance for all his mercies of old and marvelous loving kindnesses in the past to the children of men. These and other remembrances are the key-note of our gathering in this sanctuary this morning and of the ceremonies which are to follow. Those greater and lesser memories so precious to you, so vast and far reaching, many of which you know, some of which I know and for all of which words are weak and impotent to adequately express any aspect of that tremendous total of human experience, of human bravery and hope, and loss, and life, and death. For us of the newer generation it is one of those things which our fathers have told us, for you it is a living present memory. It is a season set apart to honor the memory of the dead, but these are not mere days of sadness, of solemnity without gladness. It is what Gen. Sherman calls "a festival time of the dead," a time to rejoice in their memory and to pay them everlasting honor.

Men of the Gregg Post No. 95 of the Grand Army of the Republic, in Bellefonte;—in behalf of myself and of the congregation of St. John's Parish, I bid you welcome to our House of Prayer and Praise, to join with us in the worship of Almighty God, in preparation for the peculiar duties and observance of Decoration Day. You do us honor by your presence here. You embody forth for us the lessons of the past, the inspiration for the future. You need us and we need you, that is each, the loving fellowship, sympathy, and mutual respect of the other.

A free church in a free land should be like brother and sister, each independent in his own sphere, should contribute something for the other to emulate. If any fraction of that church has not the highest welfare of its country as one of its chief motives it is traitorous at heart. Here this morning, the church and the State are met together to worship the God who stands as the head of both. For the nation, like the church and the family are God's institutions.

I said you do us honor—yes—any military organization would do that, but you do us peculiar honor. As I look upon you and know that there are those among you who joined that prompt and eager march the Bellefonte Fencibles across the valleys and through the woods, which if the hills of Lewistown had not been between you and a railroad, would have brought you first to your country's defence; then I know that the spirit of the "minute men at Concord has been repeated in our country's history. All this was fitting in the home of the trusted and beloved War Governor of this imperial State, who stood steadfastly by the great and lonely Lincoln in all his hours of trial; who seemed to understand him best and was prompt-est in his support. The year must come when such a service as this can no more be repeated, when it cannot again be said of men in the present, but only of the past. Let us tell our children then when they ask us, let us train them to ask what this service means, what all that service meant.

Of that time and its memories the dead speak to us as well as the living. They paid the last price of the victory of war, even as those who have died since and you who are still living had been willing to do So the victory of honor won, the spiritual victory of gratitude down the generations is forever theirs and yours. And it is this same thought of spiritual victory, my dear brethern, which is the deep drum roll, which sounds the keynote; the firm rock on which all, our hope is based, which makes us joyful and not sad on Decoration Day.

Now let me, if I can, briefly and simply sum up and particularize the great prima l thought which it is fitting that we should keep distinctly in mind at this time. And that which perhaps comes first of all in order of relation, is Patriotism, Patriotism,—the love and loyalty to our native country, to our "Fatherland" and the principles for which its history stands, that deep, instinctive, poetic, beautiful passion which is never wanting in the true man:

"I love thy rocks and rills;
Thy woods and templed hills, thy name I love
Long may thy land be bright,
With freedom's holy light!
Protect us by thy might, Great God our King."

And next, that which we more particularly commemorate at this time springing out of the first, is thankfulness for deliverance from the great danger of disunion from which the Civil War saved us; for the principles of liberty then vindicated, for the abolition of slavery and finally in greatful memory of those who fought our battles for us. You, the survivors, the veteran soldiers of the War join with us those of the older generation who watched you, and we of the younger generation who have heard of those, your deeds, joining together to honor those who gave their lives for the cause in battle, and those who since have followed them one by one, as we all must do into the region of the hereafter, to the innumerable hosts of all the ages, awaiting the appointed time of God, the Judge of all. This, then, is the second thought of Decoration Day, the memories which cluster around and the consequences which flow from the War of the Rebellion, the deeds of the Northern Armies which won the victory of right and justice under the favor of God.

The third and final thought in order, which, however, it would not be true to say, is the last in order of importance, is the recognition of the Christian God as the preserver of our liberties and the author of our salvation. At least, I take it that this is your intention to add this thought to the others in coming here to this place this morning to join in this preparatory service. Let us then give our attention somewhat more fully and yet with necessary brevity to these three thoughts in turn and ponder their deeper connection with this, our observance. We do not need to go far afield to find deep and holy bonds of union, which bind in closest ties the pure well of Patriotism with the celebration of Memorial Day. There are few things which men hold dearer than life and yet men are glad to endanger their lives in defence of and out of love for their country as some of you did in battles of forty years ago. We cannot impress it upon ourselves and our children too earnestly that the nation is a holy thing, that the patriotic love is one of the purest passions by which God has given to men to work out his destiny on earth aright. That we belong to our country and it belongs to us, that there is a kind of marriage between a man's soul and his country, a bond that is indissolvable and into which relation we come at our birth.

And so I say he does not serve God truly who does not serve his country well, that its service is a part of the service of our creator and therefore as the logical result of this it must be added that while the soldier's service called for the greater sacrifice, yet there is a service which we all can and must continuously render. We must defend our liberties and preserve our unity, not only against the open and bold attack, but against the slower but equally dangerous hostility of false principles, of the decay of national morality, of partisanship, of selfish interests. It is our duty as citizens, to be ever on the watch. That true gentleman whom we are fond of calling the Father of our Country, gave us a homely maxim, whose lesson and warning we must force deep into our minds,—"eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Let us beware then, of blind obedience to party bosses, of that devilish system which says, "To the victors belong the spoils," which, unless it is checked will surely wreck the fair promise of our future and make our liberties a plaything and a mockery. Witness the late Kentucky episode, the Montana disgrace, and the sad blight upon our honor in the Cuban postal frauds. Let us vote, then as upright men, as honest men, as intelligent men, as just men. For to vote is to exercise the power of a free-born man, the prerogatives of a citizen. Let us treat a vote as we would an oath to God, a solemn, sacred thing. Bring our politics under the rule of the ten commandments

A LEAF FROM THE PAST.

Death of a Former Methodist Pastor of This Place Who Preached Here Over Half a Century Ago.

A recent letter to friends here from Marshall Graham, of Peoria, Ill., a resident of Bellefonte many years ago, announced the death at Springfield, Ill., of his brother-in-law, Rev. Frank Mills.

Reverend Mills was a well know character in Bellefonte over a half century ago. There are very few of our citizens today however, who will remember him as the pastor in charge of the Bellefonte circuit of the Methodist church in 1842-43. He is described by those who recall him as a man of small statue but of amazing force and energy. He was an ardent lover of debate and his exceptional intellectual qualities and his clever and ingenious presentation in a logical, comprehensive and effective manner of the arguments and deductions pertaining to his side of a controversy attracted large and attentive audiences whenever a difference in religious opinion called for a public discussion. Perhaps the two most note worthy debates in which Mr. Mills figured while in Bellefonte were with Rev. George Miles, of Milesburg, a minister of the Baptist church and Rev. Nathan J. Mitchell, of Howard of the Disciple church. The subject in dispute being "emersion," a much mooted question with the clergy in those days when church lines were closely drawn and church doctrines were vigorously upheld and bitterly defended.

Mr. Mills was an intellectual giant in Methodism in his time and his service in the ministry of his church extended over

GOOD WIFE! YOU NEED
SAPOLIO

It Didn't Concern Her.

An English clergyman who thought his parishioners were getting so wicked that he must tell them what would become of them if they did not mend their ways, preached a sermon on the eternal fate of the wicked, which he sought to bring home to some of the noted transgressors by personal admonition. Meeting, one day, an old woman who was well known in the parish for her gossiping propensities, he said to her:—

"I hope my sermon has borne fruit. You heard what I said about that place where there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth?"

"Well, as to that," answered the dame, "if I 'as anything to say, it be this,—let them gnash their teeth as has 'em,—I ain't?"—Success.

COMMISSIONERS AT MANILA.

They Have Extensive Powers in Reconstructing the Government.

Manila, June 4.—The United States transport Hancock, from San Francisco April 17, arrived here yesterday morning with the members of the Philippine commission. The members of General MacArthur's staff welcomed the commissioners on board the Hancock. At noon the commissioners landed and drove to the palace, escorted by General MacArthur's staff, a band and two companies of the Twenty-sixth infantry, with artillery. At the palace the commissioners were welcomed by General MacArthur in a short and forceful address. After Judge William H. Taft, president of the commission, had replied, the commissioners returned to the Hancock, where they will remain until they have selected suitable dwellings on land.

During the morning the members of the Filipino supreme court, the local editors and many of the leading merchants repaired to the transport, where they conversed with the commissioners. Rear Admiral Remey called officially during the afternoon. Today General McArthur returned the call of the commissioners. The family of Judge Taft will remain for a while in Japan. The families of the other commissioners arrived with them.

Judge Taft, speaking in reply to a press representative regarding to the powers and future work of the commission, said:

"We have full instructions and extensive powers. The latter we shall not exercise until we have had ample time to acquire sufficient knowledge of the situation to enable us to proceed to enact legislative changes and reforms, preliminary to the establishment of a stable civil government. General MacArthur will continue as the executive head until, upon our recommendation to President McKinley, it shall seem that the time has arrived for the appointment of a civil executive."

Lone Highwayman Made Good Haul.

Raymond, Cal., June 4.—The lone highwayman who on Saturday held up three Yosemite stages and two wagons and two United States cavalrymen is still at large. The number of people held up numbered 32, twenty-seven men and five women. Major Rucker and Captain Wilcox, with 68 men of Troop F, who were on their way to Yosemite, reached the scene just as the robber was about to open the express box. Seeing the troopers he disappeared in the brush. The robber spoke with a Swedish accent and his description corresponds with that of the man who held up two stages at Big Oak Flat on May 18. From the three stages he collected about $250.

INDIA FAMINE HORRORS

As Depicted by Americans Who Have Witnessed Them.

THE WORST HAS NOT BEEN TOLD.

Missionary Hume and Publisher Klopsch Tell of an Appalling Condition of Affairs—The Greatest Distress Exists in the Native States.

New York, June 4.—Rev. Edward S. Hume, a missionary of the American board, who has seen 25 years of service in Bombay, arrived last week direct from India. Mr. Hume has been connected with the Bombay branch of the India famine charitable relief fund, and was secretary of the inter-denominational relief committee. Speaking before the executive committee of the committee of one hundred on India famine relief Mr. Hume said:

"I have read the accounts of the famine published in the American papers; I have seen the pictures; I have seen the conditions in the famine districts and I can assure you that the actual state of affairs is much more terrible than printed or pictured. And the worst of it is that, even if the June rains are entirely favorable, no relief can be expected till the crop is gathered in October.

"The distress is not equal over the famine area. At its worst centers, as in Gujarat and Rajpuana, conditions are dreadful beyond all description. Before leaving India I visited the government relief works at Ahmedabad and Ghorda, in Gujarat, and saw those awful sights that photographs are making familiar to people here. The emaciated lay around the relief camps. Many were dying each day, for they were too far gone for food to save them. The dead and the dying lay side by side, the dead being gathered daily from the living and burned. Magnificent work of relief is being carried on by the British government and by private agencies. The government now has on relief about 6,000,000 of souls, a scheme of charity vaster than ever before conceived, let alone carried out.

"Distress is greatest in the native states, where, on account of their independence, British control is least, and where native rulers are more indifferent to human life. There are 688 native states, ranging in size from that of an American county to nearly the area of Italy. More than five hundred are in the famine district, and about half of these are in the Bombay presidency. Knowing of the better conditions prevailing in territoreis under full control of the government of India, multitudes flock there from the native states and thus add to the problem the government has to deal with. Gujarat and Rajputana suffer most, partly because they are composed largely of native states. In the former, before I left more than 1,000,000 cattle had perished out of a total of 1,-300,000. Even under the most favorable climatic conditions vast areas must remain untilled for want of work cattle."

Louis Klopsch, of New York, publisher of the Christian Herald, who arrived at Bombay May 14 and started at once on a tour of the famine stricken district, has returned to that city, after traveling through the most sorely smitten portions of Bombay presidency, including Gujarat and Barolda. He yesterday sent the following cablegram:

"Everywhere I met the most shocking and revolting scenes. The famine camps have been swept by cholera and smallpox. Fugitives, scattering in all directions and stricken in flight, were found dying in the fields and roadside ditches. The numbers at one relief station were increasing at the rate of 10,000 per day.

"At Godhra there were 3,000 deaths from cholera within four days ,and at Dohad 2,500 in the same period. The hospital death rate at Godhra and Dohad was 90 per cent.

"The conditon of the stricken simply beggars description. Air and water were impregnated with an intolerable stench of corpses. At Ahmedabad the death rate in the poorhouse was 10 per cent. Every day I saw new patients placed face to face with corpses. In every fourth cot there was a corpse.

"The thermometer read 115 in the shade. Millions of flies hovered around the uncleansed dysentery patients.

"I visited the smallpox and cholera wards at Viragam. All the patients were lying on the ground, there being no cots. Otherwise their condition was fair.

"I can fully verify the reports that vultures, dogs and jackals are devouring the dead. Dogs have been seen running about with children's limbs in their jaws.

"The government is doing its best, but the native officials are hopelessly and heartlessly inefficient. Between the famine, the plague and the cholera the condition of Bombay presidency is now worse than it has been at any previous period in the nineteenth century. Whole families have been blotted out. The spirit of the people is broken, and there may be something still worse to come when the monsoon beraks."

Consecrated Bishop of Savannah.

Richmond, June 4.—Rev. Benjamin J. Kelley was consecrated bishop of Savannah at St. Peter's, the cathedral church of the Virginia diocese, in Richmond yesterday. Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, was the consecrator, assisted by Right Rev. John J. Monaghan, bishop of Wilmington, Del., and Right Rev. Henry P. Northrop, bishop of Charleston. Rev. Francis Xavier McCarthy, S. T., was the preacher.

Pittsburg, June 4.—Pittsburg glass has finally made an inroad into the foreign market. The start is made with American product, made by American workmen, operating American machinery. During the past week the National Glass company sent ten carloads of glass tableware and lamps to Australia, which is the first shipment of the kind.

Will Forecast Floods.

The chief of the United States weather bureau contemplates the establishment of a hydrographic division. A system of water forecasts is to be accomplished by means of many stations in different localities, the object being the study of all rivers in the country, observation relating to precipitation and the height of river waters. The stage of water in all rivers is to be reported daily and from data so obtained forecasts for the following twenty-four hours are deducted and telegraphed to the central office at Washington.

EDITORIAL.

Did you read the news from Oregon?

Hon. Fred Kurtz, of the Centre Reporter as a "resolutor" is a warm number.

The protective tariff isn't going to be forgotten in this Presidential campaign, even if the Democrats would like to pass it by.

What is the use of all this trouble over selecting a candidate for the Vice Presidency? McKinley can pull any decent man through all right.

Hon. Robert M. Foster, of State College, who wanted to go back to the legislature made the discovery that the Centre County Democrats are almost a unit against "third termers."

One thing is certainly admirable in the British army, and that is the way the officers do their work with out too much talking. Had Roberts and Kitchener been in the United States navy, for instance, they would probably have enacted the Sampson-Schley business over again.

Chairman Kerr, of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, says that he has sent out practically no 16 to 1 speeches this year. There is no demand for silver literature, the subject being a dead one, all statements by the Honorable Billy Bryan to the contrary notwithstanding.

John Oleo Hamilton, the Secretary of Agriculture for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is still "it". The farmers, dairymen, and butter men of the State are making it warm for him however, and nothing apparently will satisfy them but his removal from office. Can you blame them?

The Louisville Courier-Journal quotes the following words of the poet applying them to the Democratic party: "The lightning bug is brilliant, But it hasn't any mind; It stumbles through existence, With its headlight on behind." Doesn't that fit the free silver, anti-expansion party to a T?

The Boston Board of Health has declared consumption a contagious disease, and provided for isolating and disinfecting cases coming under their jurisdiction and authority. It seems not only an injustice, but very heartless to deprive a consumptive of the means of earning his living, and supporting those who depend upon him as long as he is able to work, and it is probable that some stronger proof that consumption is contagious will have to be furnished before public opinion will support the new regulations.

IF THE REPUBLICANS OF CENTRE ARE TO UNITE, WHY NOT NOW?

"It is high time that the warring factional leaders in the Republican party in Centre County bury the hatchet and get together on political issues at least. There can be no hope for Republican success in the county this coming fall, or any other fall, so long as the party is disunited. It is manifestly unfair to the Republicans of the county in general that the animosities and personal grievances, real or fancied, of a few party leaders, and would-be party leaders, should be dragged into the party organization to blight its present and destroy, perhaps, its future. I am for peace and harmony and in my humble judgment there exists no good and sufficient excuse for continuing the Republican party in Centre County as a cat's-paw for the personal use of two or more antagonistic citizens who happen to be Republicans." Thus spoke recently a prominent Republican of Bellefonte who, fortunately for himself, it may well be said, managed to maintain a strict neutrality during the past several heated Republican conflicts in the county.

We heartily concur in every sentiment expressed in the foregoing remarks. We, too, would gladly welcome harmony in the Republican party in Centre County and, moreover, we stand ready and willing to do what we can to compass such a desirable event. We, too, confess that we cannot foresee success for the party in coming campaigns until factionalism is eliminated from its ranks and harmony characterizes its future political operations. We, too, believe it to be a grievous wrong to the party to make it the instrument with which to mete out revenge in a personal feud in which political differences are used as a subterfuge, a cloak as it were, to conceal the true cause of the bitter contention between two or more of our prominent party men. We, too, believe that no reasonable excuse can be given for prolonging the factional warfare within our party lines. Why should not the factions in the party unite and pull together? Centre County is, beyond question, an Anti-Quay county and has always been so regarded. If left to themselves the Republicans of the county would by their votes emphasize this assertion whenever Quayism was involved in the issues of a campaign.

A personal enmity toward ex-Governor Hastings actuated Judge Love and others to lead a demonstration against him under the guise of Quayism against "Insurgency." In their several attempts to accomplish their aims they met with defeat. A potent factor in their canvass in each contest was the distribution of official patronage. Judge Love, as the recognized agent of the Quay machine for Centre County, was in charge of the pie counter. There were post-offices, census enumeratorships and several miscellaneous positions under the State and Federal governments to parcel out among the "faithful," not so much in recognition of past service to the Republican party, as many of the appointments gave proof, as in consideration for present and future assistance to the cause of Quayism. These billets have all been bestowed upon favored partisans. The Judge has exhausted his allotment of official plums, his pie counter is stripped of its wares and with them has departed the said chief factor in his persuasive political influence in the county, and with it all he has not succeeded in placing the county in the Quay column or driving Governor Hastings out of politics.

The Judge knew well that the moment he stepped down from the bench and entered the political arena to battle for a political boss he jeopardized his chances for a second term as President Judge of Centre County but he had visions of a Federal Judicial appointment to be secured through the influence of his machine allies and he was content and willing to take the risk. That influence upon which he hung his hopes for greater official distinction is, alas for him, steadily on the decrease and it is safe to say that it will be much less influential with the next National administration than it has been with the present.

His Honor, the machine champion in Centre County, has had nothing but reverses and misfortune since he openly espoused the cause of Quay. He has suffered defeat in every contest he directed. He has signally failed in his coveted desire to discredit and humiliate Governor Hastings at home and abroad. He has by his intense political activity—an unpardonable defection in judicial deportment—brought reproach and censure upon his official station. He has exhausted his ammunition. He has played his last card, and he is on a sinking ship. We ask those Republicans in Centre County who have followed in his wake, what will it profit you to keep alive the factional strife in your party? Whatever future contentions there may be in the Republican party in Centre County, Quay versus Anti-Quay will not be the issue, that question has been settled. Are you willing to sacrifice the future of your party in Centre County to gratify the personal spleen of the leader of a forlorn hope? That is what a continuance of our factional strife means. Think it over. It is needless to say that the Republican party in Centre County will be an unimportant factor in political campaigns in the county until union solidifies its ranks. That is apparent to all in the party and out of it. Will we fight to beat Democracy, our common political foe, or will we fight to ruin and annihilate ourselves?

A NATIONAL DISHONOR, NOT A PARTY CRIME.

The Cuban postal frauds are being thoroughly investigated by the Administration. Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow is now in charge there, and the criminals will be punished as quickly as the law permits.

Nothing could have been stronger or more explicit than the orders of Postmaster General Smith to Mr. Bristow to unearth the frauds in the Cuban post-office and to use his utmost endeavor to bring the culprits to justice. The Administration is determined that the guilty shall not escape punishment, and the appointment of a non-partisan committee by the United States Senate is assurance that none of the facts in the case will be concealed.

The Democratic papers are making a great outcry about the Cuban postal frauds. Of course they take the occasion offered by the unfortunate circumstance to use it as an argument against the probity and integrity of the McKinley administration and as an evidence of the inability of the Republican party to honestly and faithfully administer the affairs of the National government.

The Democrats are more interested in finding and seizing a question that will serve their purpose during the campaign than in advancing any positive policy of government. With them it is "anything to get there."

Concerning the question of "official misappropriation" of public moneys our Democratic friends should not forget that the record of defalcation of Government funds shows stealings of $5.17 in every $1,000 under Democratic administrations, as compared with only 46 cents in every $1,000 under Republican administrations.

Colonel Bryan, it is said, has received information which leads him to conclude that the vote of Kentucky will be thrown out next fall if the Goebel iniquity is not repealed before the election, and he has, therefore stirred up his Kentucky champion, Senator Joe Blackburn, to advocate the repeal of the law. It is likely that Col. Bryan's information is correct. The House that would count the vote of any state that had been cast under such a law as the Goebel law, must care nothing for the real will of the people.

The Republicans regard the Cuban frauds as a disgrace to the country, but the Democrats regard them as an opportunity to make political capital at the expense of their own national reputation.

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

Last Saturday's Democratic primaries practically decided the action of Tuesday's Democratic convention and it can be said, therefore, that the work of the covention was but the ratification of the primary manifesto.

The roll call recorded almost a full complement of delegate representatives. The lack of enthusiasm which characterized the deliberations of the convention should not be construed by the Republican hosts as an indication that Centre County Democracy is indifferent to the result of the forthcoming election. A foreknowledge of the result of the convention's actions may have dulled the keen edge of Democratic exultation and thus robbed it of its old-timed ardor. The Centre County Democrats may be relied upon to give their Republican opponents a stiff fight on the county ticket and the hopelessness of their cause in the State and National contests will doubtless spur them on to heroic effort in their local contention. We had best be prepared for a hot campaign.

The proceedings of the convention were harmonious and amicable in the extreme and what they lacked in enthusiasm they make up in unanimity of sentiment and action. The resolutions, which were passed without a dissenting voice, leave no doubt but that the county Democracy is united against the McKinley administration, the Stone administration and the Quay machine.

The resolution presented by Hon. Fred Kurtz, of the Centre Reporter, and adopted by a unanimous vote, calling for the impeachment of Governor Stone, may be regarded as the most remarkable feature of the convention's session. It has occasioned wide-spread comment and is generally accepted as a just and well merited condemnation of a public servant whose official deportment has been and is of a character scarcely calculated to inspire the respect and confidence of a people who esteem the laws of the Commonwealth and revere its constitutional mandates.

While it is not likely that the Senate of Pennsylvania will at its next session act upon the impeachment recommendation of the Centre County Democratic convention the impeachment resolution gives to the citizens of Pennsylvania at large a pretty truthful and correct impression of the sentiment in Centre County against the boss-owned and machine-controlled Governor's willful violation of fundamental law and his flagrant disregard of public opinion and public interests.

The action of the Centre County Democrats in openly denouncing Pennsylvania's Chief Executive for his unblushing and vicious usurpation of constitutional authority is concurred in by hundreds of Centre County Republicans who view in the same light the reprehensible and unlawful conduct of Mr. Quay's Governor.

The convention's tirade against the Republican party on the "trust" question must present itself in a humorous phase to the average citizen when the attitude of the Democratic representatives in Congress a few days ago on an anti-trust resolution is recalled. It is one thing to rant against trusts and another to act against them.

Of course, the convention resoluted against McKinley and the National administration in the most violent and fierce style. That is a prerogative they possess and one they employ with the same regularity that marks the meeting of their county conventions. The vote of the Centre County Democrats, however, will not accomplish the defeat of the Republican National ticket in November next, so the country is safe and will prosper and flourish in spite of Democracy in Centre County, in Pennsylvania and the country over.

Our friends the enemy are in battle array and only await the appearance in the political arena of their Republican contestants to begin the struggle.

What is the matter with having four years more of the Advance Agent of Prosperity?

THE CURTIN MONUMENT.

To the Editor of Republican:

I was present to hear Mr. Egle's oration in the Court House on Memorial Day and while there heard Judge Beaver explain about the Curtin monument.

I do not like to find fault with the people who are managing the Curtin monument fund, but as Judge Beaver appears to be the whole show I will give him a few suggestions which, incidently, may apply to others.

The Memorial meeting in the Court House was intended to promote the monument, Judge Beaver took about as much time talking about the monument as Dr. Egle did in delivering his oration, but there were several things that I would have liked to know, he told us nothing about.

Judge Beaver, will you please tell us how much money has been subscribed and how much cash there is on hand?

Will Judge Beaver please tell the public the names of the Finance Committee having in charge the funds of the Curtin Memorial?

Judge Beaver, in his speech that evening, said that the monument and all, completed, would cost $25,000 and that it would be only necessary to raise five thousand of it in Bellefonte; will he or the Finance Committee please explain how much of the other $20,000 he has on hand and what is being done with the money? Judge Beaver said that the monument ought to be completed this year and urged prompt action.

There is a general impression that Judge Beaver is holding this work back more than all others combined. If he wants to complete the monument this year why doesn't he appoint his Finance Committee?

Why doesn't he appoint the Committee on Location of the monument and have an ordinance introduced and passed by council forever establishing the site of the monument?

If it is the intention of the Centre County Veteran Association to have this monument completed within a year, why doesn't Beaver or the Committee, or some responsible party, invite designs from competent sculptors? Why have we not a number of designs on hand? What is the use of talking about giving the contract to an artist now studying in Paris? Does Judge Beaver have the authority to pick out the artist? Have none of the contributors anything to say about it? Why not throw it open to all competitors? Why not have plans, designs and models, that contributors may see what they are contributing their money for? Why not fix a date when the contract will be awarded for the monument?

It is now thirty-five years since the war ended. There is a deep determination in the public mind to complete the monument this year and he, who holds the enterprise back, should be forced out of the way. There has been no exhibition of business intelligence or enterprise exhibited in the management of the Curtin Memorial. The Veterans appear to have permitted it to settle down to a one-man power, and the kind of a one-man power that never fully completed anything.

In conclusion, I would say that it was an insult to the veteran soldiers outside of Bellefonte for Judge Beaver to say that out of the $25,000 to be raised not more than $2,000 could be counted upon for the Centre County people outside of Bellefonte. This is a slander upon Centre County. Outside of Bellefonte Centre County raised as many soldiers and contributed to the Union cause much more than Bellefonte did. Bellefonte is not the whole show. Judge Beaver is not the whole show. This matter belongs to the people of Centre County and to the State at large. Judge Beaver should do something or get out.

Veteran.

Milesburg, Pa., June 1, 1900.

UNCLE SAM MAY STRIKE BACK.

The German Kaiser should not presume on the good nature of the United States. If he goes ahead with his meat bill, he is likely to hear something drop over here, and drop hard and sudden-like. Of course we will not retaliate, that would be undignified, but, as the saying goes, there are more ways of killing a cat than choking it to death with cream.

For years Germany has been excluding our products on the ground that they were impure or unwholesome. Now, for the past year, there has been a law on the statute books authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to exclude impure foreign products, and it may come to pass that the Secretary will see fit to use it against Germany. The War Lord of Europe is trifling with a commercial boomerang. He had better watch a leetle out.

THEY DON'T HAVE TO HOLD THEIR JOBS.

The American Cuban Post office employees, whose salaries have been cut, complain that they should have larger pay in Cuba than in the United States, because, they urge in support of their claim, they must maintain their families at home. No doubt there is something in this, but not so much as would seem. The sooner Americans get out of all but the highest offices in Cuba and turn them over to the people who live there the better both for Cuba and the United States. The chief evil of colonial government is found in the existence of officeholders who go to the colonies simply for the salaries, with no intention of making their homes there and no stake in the future of the colony. We assume that the average American postal employe in Cuba is of this class. If his job does not pay him as he thinks and desires it should let him come home to his family and give a Cuban his place. The government will loose nothing by the exchange and it is likely to be better served.

Hon. Joseph H. Manley, chairman of the National Republican sub-executive committee, declares that Philadelphia has been anything but slow in fitting up the convention hall. He says it is the finest and best hall he ever saw, and that it has been made ready at an unprecedentedly early date.

The Democratic party has twice been tried and twice been found wanting by the present generation of voters of the country. It should hardly hope to be trusted again.

AGRICULTURISTS' CONFERENCE.

Recommendations for Legislation Made at State College by Representatives of Farming Interests.

A conference of the State Departments of Public Instruction and Agriculture and delegates of the several State agricultural and live stock associations, the Grange, Alliance and State College, called by the State Board of Agriculture to consider the present condition and needs of agricultural education in Pennsylvania, was organized Monday evening at State College, with Dr. N. C. Schaeffer, Superintendent of Public Instruction Chairman, and H. P. Armsby, Secretary. The Executive Committee, made up of a member of each of the fourteen associations represented, Tuesday afternoon presented resolutions, in brief, as follows; which were adopted by unanimous vote:

That nature study be introduced into the public schools of the State.

That the Legislature provide $10,000 for two years for the use of State College in publishing bulletins and leaflets on nature study, with special reference to agriculture, for the use of teachers of the public schools; make provision for carrying out the act establishing country high schools, and provide for the erection and maintenance of a building at State College for agricultural purposes, including instruction in dairying and forestry; and that a committee of five be named to take care of the legislation thus recommended.

The Executive Committee was made permanent, and given authority to act and to call a similar conference of State agricultural organizations and State sections of national organizations at any time. The members of the committee are Dr. N. C. Schaeffer, John Hamilton, R. J. Wild, M. N. Clark, Hiram Young, F. S. Barber, Professor S. B. Heiges, H. P. Armsby, J. D. Nevins, John I. Carter, W. H. H. Riddle and A. G. Brown, Jr.

Dolliver's Famous Peroration.

Hon. John P. Dolliver, of Iowa, of the Ways and Means Committee in the House of Representatives, and a Republican Vice-Presidential possibility, added laurels to his fame as one of the country's most brilliant orators by a peroration to a speech on the question of admitting American pork into European markets. "I hope the time will come" said Mr. Dolliver "when the American hog; with a curl of contentment in his tail and a smile of pleasure on his face, may travel untrammeled through the markets of the world."

ANNOUNCEMENT

We are authorized to announce the name of Samuel H. Diehl, of Bellefonte boro, as a candidate for Assembly, subject to the decision of the Republican County Convention.

It is not surprising that "To have and to Hold" is a popular book. Everybody likes to have and to hold things, from pretty girls to public offices.

Cuba ought to be the "old maids" paradise, as the recent census shows that the men out number the women by nearly 60,000.

GIRLHOOD, WOMANHOOD AND MOTHERHOOD

Are Renovated, Regulated and Restored by the Pelvic Catarrh Remedy Pe-ru-na.

Mrs. E. C. Everly.

Mrs. E. C. Everly, 505 Diamond Street, Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I feel well, never felt better; thanks for your attention and Pe-ru-na. I will be glad to do all I can in the way of advancing the sale of your valuable medicine. I do think Pe-ru-na the best medicine I have tried at any time. Since I began taking Pe-ru-na we have never been without it."

Read what an elderly woman says—a woman who has passed through all the phases, crises and experiences of girlhood, womanhood and motherhood: "I really believe that every woman in the world ought to have Pe-ru-na on hand all the time; for, if she gets tired, Pe-ru-na refreshes her; if she gets nervous, it soothes her; if despondent, it cheers and invigorates. It is a panacea for all irregularities of her monthly periods. It is a constant friend to the expectant mother; a never-failing stand-by to the nursing mother, both for herself and for her child, and finally when the change of life comes on, no medicine on earth is of equal efficacy to the woman in this critical period. Surely Pe-ru-na is the woman's friend."

That catarrh has any relation to barrenness in women is surprising to many. It is one of the mysteries of catarrh. This insidious disease penetrates to every organ of the body. Mrs. L. M. Griffith, of Cambridge, Neb., says: "Your medicine did me a wonderful amount of good. It cured me of barrenness. I am thirty years old and had never borne any children, but since beginning your medicine I gave birth to a ten-pound baby girl. She is now six months old, and weighs twenty-five pounds. My friends were all surprised. Some would not believe it until they came to see me. My husband says he never saw such a change in anyone as there was in me after I had taken three or four bottles of Pe-ru-na. I am stronger than I have been since I was quite young. God bless you and your medicine forever."

Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O., for free catarrh book.

LINDEN HALL ITEMS.

The Centre Reporter stepped on our toes last week by saying that Centre Hall was ahead of Linden Hall in commercial importance and stating that they would soon have a railroad from the seven mountains to their town. This last is a mistake as negotiations are already in process to secure ground at this place upon which to erect a wharf and saw mill and the prospects are that we will get the railroad and not Centre Hall.

I suffered intensely from pains in my back and lameness across my kidneys. Statements in this paper about Doan's Kidney Pills attracted my attention and I called on F. Potts Green, the druggist and got a box. They did me a great deal of good although I did not take them as regularly as I should, for the moment the pain ceased and I felt better, I stopped taking them. They gave me the greatest relief and I can give them the credit of saving me much suffering."

Died at West Elizabeth.

Mrs. Stella Way, widow of the late Irvin Way, died of spinal meningitis at West Elizabeth, Pa., Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Way whose maiden name was Hoover, was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Hoover, of Unionville, and was born near that place 26 years ago. She was married to Irvin Way of Union Twp., and moved to West Elizabeth where her husband died about six weeks ago. Her father and mother survive her as do also her two little daughters Luella and Mary.

The remains were brought to Unionville Monday afternoon and the funeral took place Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Deceased was an earnest member of the Methodist church and took a great interest in church work. Rev. Wharton, of Milesburg, officiated and the interment was made in the Unionville cemetery.

FIGHTING THE GUERRILLAS.

A Successful Military Expedition to the Island of Tablas.

Manila, June 6.—Major Johnson, with two companies of the Twenty-ninth infantry and 25 men of the Eighteenth infantry, sailed from Romblon to the neighboring island of Tablas, where they disembarked simultaneously in four columns, converging upon a central point. The Americans encountered about 60 rebels, who retreated, and they captured 40, including all the officers, together with 10,000 rounds of ammunition and 24 rifles. Forty men of the Twenty-ninth regiment, with a lieutenant, were left as a garrison, the others returning to Romlon.

Company E, of the Thirty-fifth regiment, and Company G, of the Fourth regiment, encountered 50 insurgents behind stone trenches in the high mountains near Norzagaray, province of Bulacan. There was persistent fighting, and seven Americans were wounded. Finally Company G, by a flanking movement, carried the trenches. Trumpeter Speaker, of Company G, has been commended for "determined bravery" by Gen. Funston.

Troop G, of the Fourth cavalry, Company C, of the Thirty-fourth regiment, and Company A, of the Twenty-second regiment, are pursuing the captors of Charles D. Roberts, who was taken by the Filipinos while scouting near San Miguel de Mayumo May 29.

GOVEROR STONE TURNED DOWN

Supreme Court Says He Had No Right to Veto Constitutional Amendments.

GOVERNOR TRIES TO EXPLAIN

Lebanon Court Says the Machine Caucus Pledge Is Unlawful.

DECISION AGAINST THE QUAYITE.

Governor Stone's Cut of $1,000,000 From the School Fund to Be Tested in Court—Montgomery County Directors Will Demand the Full Amount—Still More Trouble For the Machine.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Harrisburg, June 5.—Last week was perhaps the most disastrous that the Quay machine and its leaders ever experienced, not excepting the one which saw the defeat of Mr. Quay's hopes in his rejection by the United States senate.

The first of its troubles came on Tuesday last with the emphatic declaration from the supreme court that Governor William A. Stone exceeded his constitutional right when he vetoed the two amendments to the constitution approved by the last legislature providing for ballot reform in the shape of personal registration and the introduction of voting machines. The case under consideration by the court was to compel Secretary of the Commonwealth Griest to advertise the amendments. This suit was brought in the Dauphin county court, which sustained the secretary in his claim that he was not compelled to advertise the amendment. The case was carried to the supreme court, and in an opinion by Chief Justice Green he reversed the lower court, turned the governor down and ordered the amendments advertised in time for the next November election.

The opinion of Justice Green relating to the governor's unconstitutional action says in part:

"The two houses and the governor constitute the entirety of the body which considers and finally determines all matters of legislation. But it is the two houses and the great mass of the electors of the comonwealth combined which constitute the body which considers and determines questions of constitutional amendment."

The chief justice concludes by citations of authority, and says:

"The governor is without right to intervene in proceedings for the creation of amendments, and that his action in withholding his approval was altogether nugatory."

QUESTION OF ADVERTISING.

As to other questions brought before the court on appeal, that raised by the secretary of the commonwealth that as no appropriation was made of money from the public treasury to defray the cost of publication in the newspapers, the secretary of the commonwealth could not lawfully make the publication, and that the secretary of the commonwealth could not be compelled to do a vain thing—that is, publish for three months prior to an election which was to take place in November, 1899, the amendment in question—he says:

"The one relating to the matter of an appropriation has no serious force, because it does not appear that any newspapers have refused to make the publication without being paid or secured for the cost, or even that any of them have been asked to make the publication. It was at least his duty to try to make the publication before he could be heard to say that it could not be done."

The action of the supreme court was such a blow to the governor that he immediately rushed into print with a statement as to why he had vetoed the resolutions. He said that competent lawyers had advised him that he could veto unconstitutional amendments, but that outside of this fact he had vetoed them because they removed the secret ballot and substituted voting machines at a cost of a million dollars.

The governor's lawyers, all machine men and politicians, were evidently not very competent, or else the supreme court would not have played such havoc with their opinion. The proposed amendments do not remove the secrecy of the ballot, and the governor knows this. They rather protect the secrecy of the ballot. The amendments do not call for the introduction of voting machines; they only provide that in case it should ever become desirable to introduce voting machines the constitution does not prohibit it.

BALLOT REFORM ISSUE.

The voters of Pennsylvania now have the question of ballot reform, through this action of the supreme court, directly before them as an issue in the November elections. The legislature elected in November will have to again pass these amendments, after which the people will ratify their action at the ensuing state election, and then the amendments become part of the constitution. Every voter should see to it, then, that representative men of high cahracter are sent to the legislature next year to vote on these amendments. One of the strongholds of the Quay machine heretofore has been our weak election laws, which permitted the machine and its heelers to steal votes and rob the people wholesale.

In Lebanon on Friday last another Quay machine scheme was knocked in the head. Everywhere over the state wherever it could be done, county committees controlled by the machine passed resolutions declaring that before any candidate of the Republican party could have his name placed on the regular ballot he would be compelled to sign a pledge agreeing to enter the machine caucus at Harrisburg. This club has been held over the heads of many candidates. It was the last brutal device of the machine in its attempt to hold men in unwilling allegiance to its power.

In Lebanon county Senator Weiss is a candidate for re-election. The anti-Quay forces have twice swept the county by large majorities. A number of Quayites on the county committee called a meeting of the committee, which was slimly attended, and passed a resolution that before any candidate could have his name on the ticket he must sign a caucus pledge. They well knew that Dr. Weiss would not sign such a pledge. The machine crowd then registered secretly two Quay candidates for state senator who did not pay their registration fee. Of course, Dr. Weiss declined to recognize the committee's resolution, and then the chairman endeavored to force the senator to take back his registration fee. This he declined to do.

A GREAT VICTORY.

The matter was carried into court for decision. It was argued before Judge Endlich, of Berks county, who sat in Lebanon to hear it. The machine brought county chairmen from machine ruled counties like Indiana, Armstrong and Butler, to testify that these counties had passed similar resolutions. After the evidence was all in Judge Endlich declared that no county committee has a right to ask or compel any candidate to sign such a pledge and that such a pledge was unlawful because it compelled men to promise certain things before they were elected.

The result of this affects every candidate in the state in a machine ruled county. The decision of Judge Endlich smashes the caucus resolution flatter than a flounder, and removes the embargo on the manhood of every candidate. Men can go to Harrisburg now without being compelled to bow submission to the rule or ruin element in the Republican party.

ANOTHER TEST.

Still another blow, aimed at the unconstitutional actions of Governor Stone, has been prepared in Montgomery county, where Lawyer C. Tyson Kratz, attorney for several school districts, proposes to bring suit to test the governor's right to cut $1,000,000 from the school funds of the state. This action, which will be taken in a week or ten days, will be in the shape of a mandamus on Superintendent of Public Education Schaeffer, to compel him to pay the full amount of $11,000,000 in the shape of warrants on the treasury. Superintendent Schaeffer issues the warrants and State Treasurer Barnett cashes them, and so both of these officials will be mandamused.

This cut of $1,000,000 in the school appropriation was as unconstitutional on Governor Stone's part as was his vetoing of the constitutional amendments. The case would have been tested months ago but for ex-State Treasurer Beacom, a machine follower, who refused to consider courteously a proposition from Lawyer Kratz. It is in the power of State Treasurer Barnett to delay action in court for several months, but not matter what may happen the suits will be brought and the issue tested.

AN APPEAL FOR TROOPS.

St. Louis Citizens Urge Governor Stephens to Call Out the Militia.

St. Louis, June 6.—The strike situation has assumed such a serious phase that yesterday 50 prominent citizens united in a telegram to Governor Stephens, asking him to call out the militia for the protection of life and property.

Negotiations between the strikers and the St. Louis Transit company looking to a settlement of the strike are off for the present and will not be resumed until the strikers agree not to demand the discharge of the men now in the employ of the company in order that they may regain the positions they gave up when the strike was declared.

From a rioting standpoint yesterday was comparatively uneventful. Assaults on inoffensive passengers continued. William A. Snyder, of Tilsit, Mo., and William Deneke, of Houck, Mo., were set upon and brutally beaten because they rode on a Transit company car. John Krenhall, a farmer from Mexico, Mo., was taken to the city hospital suffering from a number of severe scalp wounds and internal injuries.

San Francisco Chinamen Protest.

San Francisco, June 6.—The attorneys for the Chinese Six companies yesterday filed with the clerk of the United States court an application for an injunction compelling the Board of Health of this city to abandon the quarantine which it has imposed on the Chinatown district. The petition sets forth that 10,000 persons are restrained of their liberty, but that residents of the district, other than Chinese, are not affected by the quarantine. The petition denies that there is any plague within the district.

A Drop in the Price of Iron.

Pittsburg, June 6.—The Chronicle-Telegraph says that a general drop in prices of Bessemer and foundry iron has taken place this week, and that at a meeting of the Bessemer Furnace association to be held in Cleveland on Saturday the price for the balance of the year will be fixed at $20, and that this rate will be positively maintained. As the prices on iron and steel products are founded on the rates for Bessemer pig iron, it says a reduction in all lines of finished products may be expected.

THE MEMORIAL SERMON.

and the law of Christ. Make them a part of our religion; keep them separate, but both honorable.

Then, if the majority of our citizens do that, no matter how great the difference of opinion may be, the final outcome will be likewise just and honorable and of good report. There is work for us all to do, then, in keeping our politics clean, or rather of making them so, of following with the ballot, the example of sacrifice, of far-seeing wisdom you so gloriously set us with the sword. Oh! let us try to make our patriotish like that of the men of '76, who in patient endurance, in calm and fair discussion, won and framed our liberties, as we, generation after generation, must preserve them for the time to come.

Oh! there are many things which patriotism longs to teach us if we will only linger by her side and listen to what she has to say.

Our love for this, the fairest and last born of the nations, must not be less than that of the Briton or Saxon for his "sea-girt Royal Isle," for those of Celtic race, for old Erin, their mother, of the Swiss for his Alps, of the German for the Rhine, of the Northmen for their capes and fjords of every race for the land that gave them birth. And we must teach the strangers and newcomers within our borders to do it too, to transfer their allegience and love wholeheartedly and without reserve to this, their adopted country, this fair land and nation, favored of God. We have no room for the "hyphenated American," for Americans who "have a string" to their Americanism. We have seen of late the brave but useless struggle of the Boers, and the great outburst of patriotic enthusiasm in English lands and nation, standing alone among the nations of Europe. Let us not cease to be grateful for the principles of freedom and peace, our fathers bought for us, nor to love the land even though it be new for which they shed their blood, nor be unwilling to share and extend these privileges to other people and lands if the way ever be opened to us, and if it can be done without forfeiting our own, to receive them as brothers and train them to share our heritage.

Now, to come into closer and more particular relation with the occasion and our object. It is a particular instance and embodiment of the great principle of patriotism which we are commemorating, of the results and consequences which flow from our great Civil War; and your organization stands as our exponents and guides in this.

Of late, patriotic societies have sprung into sudden prominence, "The Sons and Daughters of the Revolution," of "Colonial Wars" and of the war of 1812, and of the Mexican War; but the Grand Army of the Republic is the greatest, (though not since the Spanish War strictly the latest) of them all and the only one whose membership is composed of living participants, not of descendents in the struggle; for the Spanish War, glorious as it was, was but child's play in comparison with the combat in which you participated. These others have their own missions to fulfill, you have also yours and it is a wider one, for you represent better the present complex citizenship of our country, although in this last war the Blue and the Gray stood shoulder to shoulder, fighting for a united country and the same flag against a foreign foe. (when you fought: "children of the blood" met those of the same race and lineage.) And so I say we have need to honor you for what you have done and for what you are. I, for one profess myself glad to come into nearer acquaintance with the purpose and nature of your organization and it is well for the public at large to better understand what these may be. So then, with your permission, I will read for the edification of us all, the preambles and first articles of your "Rules and Regulations" which gives the basis of your confederation: "We, the soldiers and sailors of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, of the United States, who have consented to this union, having aided in maintaining the honor, integrity and supremacy of the national government during the late Rebellion, do unite to establish a permanent association for the objects hereinafter set forth." These objects as embodied in Art. II, are as follows:

1. To preserve and strengthen those kind and fraternal feelings which bind together the soldiers, sailors and marines, who united to suppress the late Rebellion and to perpetuate the memory and history of the dead." It was to fulfill this last provision that Decoration or Memorial Day was established, a just and beautiful and rightful act for us and them.

"2. To assist such former comrades in arms as need help and protection and to extend needful aid to the widows and orphans of those who have fallen." Again, the natural impulse of those who are comrades.

"3. (And this is a statement to which we must all subscribe) "To maintain true allegience to the United States of America, based upon a paramount respect for, and fidelity to, its constitutions and laws; to discountenance whatever tends to weaken loyalty, incites to rebellion, treason or insurrection; or in any manner impairs the efficiency and permanency of our free institutions and to encourage the spread of universal liberty, equal rights and justice to all."

This is your object. For this we honor and respect you and we recognize in these words lawful children, free-born off-spring of those august documents, the Constitution of the United States of America, and the Declaration of Independence, and so we can see behind these exercises the great background of all our history. Let us praise God for the blessings which he has permitted us to share.

We can say that such organizations as these are not worthy and beneficent and necessary in the highest degree, and who would not be ashamed to say that all true and patriotic citizens of our beloved nation do not owe them respect, gratitude and emulation.

That our children should be taught to honor, respect and venerate the traditions and heroic memories of the past which they represent. That our nation may be a christian nation, one great, mighty, united, strong in its patriotism, a nation of God-fearing men, of christian men, of christian children, of families which are centres of peace, purity and virtue.

We have left far too little time and space to speak as we would wish, of that third great thought which sustains our faith in times like this, of God our Father and Jesus Christ, His Son. This much we are bound to add, that if it can be said without protest that he does not serve God who fails to serve his country, then the converse of this is also true. That no man can truly serve his country, who does not truly serve his God.

No nation can be secure, no soul can be safe or be happy which is not founded upon the eternal rock of our salvation.

Men of the G. A. R., the greater part of your host is on that other shore. In whose protection then, are they resting? In whose name and power is it that you trust to see them once more? Is it not in Jesus Christ who overcame death and opened unto us the gate of Everlasting Life.

Let us then remember the glory of our nation's history, let us remember the glory and mercy of our God in all the ages to the children of men, let us remember the offer of salvation given us in these last times through his Son. Let me beseech you as soldiers who have fought in one good cause, while you linger still on the earth, not to forget that other good fight under the banner of Christ your Savior against sin, the world and the devil. That you may war a good warfare, holding faith and a pure conscience, using diligence to make your calling and election sure. That your care be extended to the children, that by your example they too may be trained in the ways of God. Oh! train the children train them, lest we forget, lest they forget.

As is my bounded duty in this place and in my character as an officer in Christ's church and a minister of His Gospel, let me not fail to exhort you to this. And let me close using the fitting words of St. Peter, the twelfth verse of the first chapter of his second Epistle, which expresses the thought which I have in mind most exactly:

"Wherefore I would not be negligent to put in remembrance of these things though ye know them and be established in the present truth. Yea, I think it meet as long as I am in this present tabernacle to stir you up, putting you in remembrance, knowing that shortly 'we all, each and every one of us, must' put off this tabernacle even as our Lord Jesus Christ has showed us,' giving us an example that in all things we should follow in His steps." The Captain of our Salvation, the leader of the armies of truth and righteousness in God's warfare with all that is false and evil. Heaven's battle with Hell and all the forces of sin and darkness in which the victory is forever sure for God and Heaven and "just men made perfect" through the blood of the Savior and Prince of men.

War Department officials regard the relations between Russia and Japan as being so strained that they have arranged to send American army officers to observe the fighting, if there is war.

A PAIR OF MODEL LOVERS.

BY HOWARD FIELDING.

Copyright, 1899, by Charles W. Hooke.

Horace Lorrimer, the illustrator, has a studio on the top floor of the Rogers building. I go up there frequently because I like him and the view from his studio windows.

He nearly always gets me to pose for him. Posing is hard work. If I ever lose the property which my ancestors were kind enough to amass, I shall not turn to posing for a living. It's wonderful how tired one gets standing or even sitting perfectly still for half an hour. But Lorrimer has played on my vanity. He has told me that I can hold a pose longer than any one else; that I'm a Hercules for standing on one foot in the attitude of a man going up stairs with no stairs to go up, and in that way he has encouraged me until I'm likely to lame myself for life if I don't stop going to his place.

I WAS A YANKEE SHOOTING A SPANIARD.

One day it was a war picture that he was making. I was a Yankee shooting a Spaniard. When I began to pose, the gun Lorrimer gave me was just an ordinary rifle. Half an hour later it was a 13 inch cannon, to judge by the weight.

Just as I was on the verge of collapse the prettiest girl in the world walked into the studio. That's the only way to describe her. My heart didn't beat for ten minutes after she came in.

But Lorrimer—well, you know him. He merely nodded his head toward a chair on the other side of the room and went right on with his job.

The girl seemed to be used to that kind of reception. She walked, or glided, or floated, or whatever word is good enough to describe such a carriage as she has, over to the chair that he had indicated and sat down in it.

Lorrimer had posed me in such a way that I was pointing the gun exactly at the girl's head. She didn't seem to mind it much, but it was altogether too thrilling for me, and I gently shifted my aim.

"Don't move! Don't move!" yelled Lorrimer. "Get back to your pose or you'll ruin everything."

I didn't want to spoil his picture, so I hastily resumed my position. Then the girl started to move her chair, but Lorrimer called out:

"Keep still, Alice! You bother me."

And she subsided. This interesting situation lasted for about ten minutes, and then Lorrimer said "All right!"—as if he had been a hypnotist and I his subject—and he jumped up and went across the room to shake hands with the girl.

"Splendid model," I heard her whisper. "Who is he?"

"His name's Williams," Lorrimer replied. "Shall I introduce him?"

She laughed and said "Certainly," and Lorrimer galloped through the form of an introduction. I was pretty warm by that time. In this democratic land professional models may be as good as anybody else, but I didn't care to be mistaken for one. It was especially painful that the error should be made by a member of the profession who ought to know the trademark.

Perhaps I might have scorned her judgment if she had not been so atrociously pretty and so well got up. If I had not recognized her as the original of many female figures in Lorrimer's pictures, I might have thought her an acquaintance of his in high society, despite her free and easy way of wandering into a gentleman's studio and the brusque treatment accorded her.

In conversation she was as sweet as she could be. She talked about art with that superficial familiarity that people get who frequent studios, yet I could see that she had considerable appreciation of what was really good.

When she mentioned posing, of course she gave the idea that she did it for amusement and because art wouldn't be art if she didn't, whereas I did it for a living and, being a professional, could doubtless teach her a great many things.

Lorrimer was hugging himself with delight. He is a practical joker who stops at nothing. He'd let himself be buried alive for the sake of getting a laugh on the sexton. The way in which he treated me as if I were worth 50 cents an hour and no more was beautiful to see.

I fell in with him to the best of my ability. If the girl couldn't tell the difference between me and a professional model, I would not point it out to her. It struck me that she might feel worse about it if she found out her mistake at a later day. Meanwhile I treated her with the deference appropriate to my humble station, and let me remark right here in parenthesis that no deference I could show to her if I were the sole ruler of the universe would be more than her due.

However, I could not help cherishing a petty resentment against her for the estimate she had made of me, and so I was willing to let the little joke run on. There was good sport for a few minutes, and then I positively had to leave.

I knew that I should meet Alice—I hadn't caught her last name—again in Lorrimer's studio, and, as a matter of fact, she was there the very next time I called. That day Lorrimer got us to pose together for a society picture, something sweet and sentimental. I had the pleasure during almost an hour of gazing into the softest brown eyes in the world, while I maintained a loverlike attitude that nearly broke my neck.

That evening Carleton King came round to see me at my rooms, and from him I learned some facts about Lorrimer's model. Alice Gray was her name, and she was well liked in all the studios because she posed so well for society stuff.

She had three swell dresses that were her business capital, and by means of them and the personal charm that gave them grace she earned from $7 to $10 a week. And she had to take care of a little sister who was an invalid.

I reflected quite seriously upon this information, and the more I reflected the less easily could I reconcile any deception practiced upon such a girl with my idea of gentlemanly conduct. However, I couldn't bring myself to tell her who I was, for I was afraid she would treat me differently if I did, and I was more than satisfied with the situation exactly as it was.

We met frequently at Lorrimer's studio. Indeed we posed for all the figures in that long series of illustrations that he made for Benton Ives' interminable magazine serial. In half a dozen sets of characters she was the loved and I the lover.

I was on my knees before her until I wore a hole in Lorrimer's hard pine floor. I posed with my arm around her. I kissed her hand. I was accepted with maidenly reserve. I was rejected with scorn. In fact, I passed one half my time pretending to be in love with her and the other half trying not to be, for it really wouldn't do, you know. I was fully aware of that.

"Williams," said Lorrimer to me one day, "you make a great lover. You look the part."

And Alice laughed and said I was the most realistic man in that capacity that she had ever met.

I had made up my mind that the thing had gone far enough. Without allowing myself to be an idiot about it I couldn't help noticing that Alice was becoming interested in me. I couldn't let that go on.

Then there was another aspect of the case. I wanted to help her. I learned from King that the poor little sister was worse, that she needed everything that the rich can have and others can't and that there had been some talk of a subscription among the artists. Now, of course I could have fixed that whole matter, and my pocket would never have known the difference, but I couldn't do it in the character of a 50 cents an hour model.

I had decided just how and when I should tell her all about it, and then, of course, I did it exactly as I wouldn't have planned to do. We had left the studio together and were walking up Broadway—Broadway, of all places for such a scene! She said that she must hurry home, and I saw a pained look in her face.

"Alice," said I, "there's a secret I must tell you, and now's the time. This begins like a scene in a melodrama, but don't you laugh. I've been sailing under false colors, and I want to hoist the true ones. I'm not a model. I can't lay claim to that or any other honest trade. I'm merely a rich fellow, with nothing to do and no disposition to do anything even if I had it. I'm the son and heir of the Williams' iron works and the Iroquois Loan and Trust company. Do you see that bank right across the street?" We happened to be opposite the Ninth National. "Well, that bank would cash my check for a fortune."

Naturally when I spoke of the bank her eyes turned in that direction. Instantly she interrupted me with a sharp cry.

"Wait!" she exclaimed. "Wait for me here! I'll come back!"

And she darted across the street regardless of cable cars and lesser commercial juggernauts. She disappeared in the Ninth National bank building, and a moment later, regardless of her request, I rushed after her.

The situation was too much for me. It looked as if the girl had gone across to inquire what my balance was, which you will admit would have been a very unusual proceeding. I could not find her in the bank, and the king of the elevators in the main hall said that he had seen no one answering that description. After a fruitless search I returned to the spot where we had parted, regretting deeply my folly in ever having left it. Alice did not appear.

On reaching my home in the Belleaire apartments late that afternoon the hallboy handed me a letter that had been addressed to me there "in care of the janitor." The envelope bore the name of the Brayton Car Wheel company, and the letter within merely requested John Williams to call at the office on a matter that might prove to be considerably to his advantage.

I knew Charley Brayton of that company very slightly, but had never met his father, who is the head of the firm. I judged that young Brayton had dictated a note to me about some club matter and that a stupid secretary had mixed it with some other.

Being down town the next day, I called at the Brayton company's office. Charley was not in, but the old gentleman was just passing by as I gave my name to the boy at the rail.

"Williams? Williams?' said he. "Oh, yes; let him come in."

I followed the pompous old fellow into his office. He seated himself and beamed upon me through powerful glasses, which, however, appeared not to quite remedy the defects of his vision.

"Williams," said he, "I have been informed by a—a person in whose opinion I have the greatest confidence, that you are a very worthy fellow."

"Don't you ever have confidence in that person's opinion again," said I. "He's off his base."

The old man's jaw dropped.

"More likely perhaps he was referring to somebody else," I continued. "I am Jack Williams, loafer, and any clubman in town will tell you that I'm no good at any honest work, for I take it, my dear sir, from your manner, that under some strange misapprehension you were about to offer me a job."

"Well—er—that is—Mr. Williams," he stammered, "to be perfectly frank with you, my daughter, who sometimes visits the studio of her cousin, Mr. Horace Lorrimer, told me that you were earning a precarious living as an artist's model and that she believed you capable of better things."

"May I ask, Mr. Brayton, if you have seen your daughter since yesterday?"

"No, sir; no, sir; I have not. I spent the night out of town. I am told by a young man who was here a few minutes ago that my daughter narrowly missed me yesterday afternoon at the Ninth National bank. She saw me from across the street or something of that sort. I don't fancy it could have related to this matter."

"But it did," said I. "Miss Brayton had just been informed that I did not need work, and she wanted to tell you about it in a hurry, knowing that otherwise she mightn't see you till today."

At that moment Alice herself burst into the office. She checked herself suddenly at sight of me and stood there looking from one to the other of us.

"Well, I hope you and father have had a good time," said she at last.

"We haven't quarreled yet," said I. "He's offered me a job, but it isn't the one I want."

"What's that?"

"I want him to engage me as a son-in-law."

She looked at the second button of my waistcoat for about a quarter of a minute and then up into my face again.

"I have already recommended you highly for any position," she said.

So that was all settled, and nothing remained but to square accounts with Lorrimer and his assistant liar, Carleton King.

Coastwise.

"Papa," said Tommy Northside, who had been reading news from the Atlantic shore, "what kind of a steamer is a coastwise steamer?"

"A steamer wise enough to keep off the rocks along the coast," replied Mr. Northside.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

THROUGH LEADEN HAIL

BY ERNEST JARROLD

Copyright, 1899, by Ernest Jarrold.

Mrs. Williams was leaning over the washtub when the postman came. She dried her hands on her apron and took the postal card from his hand. The message was brief, but eloquent. It read:

Dear Mother—I have enlisted in the Seventy-first regiment. I was ashamed to look you in the face because I am such an utter failure. I will send you all my wages. We have already started for the front. Goodby. ROGER WILLIAMS.

The postal card fluttered to the floor. The daylight seemed to fade into a gray mist before the eyes of the stricken mother. She sat, white lipped and tearless, gazing at the wall, but seeing nothing. Her little boy Roger gone to the war to be killed! It was incredible. Why, it seemed only yesterday that he was playing on the floor at her feet, his childish chatter an inspiration, his laugh a symphony. Oh, how could he leave her! Vaguely, wonderingly, she looked at her hands. Those callouses on her palms! Those large, ugly knuckles! The washtub had left its ineffaceable impression that Roger might wear creased trousers and patent leather shoes.

He was not a bad boy, she mused; only careless, indifferent and selfish through thoughtlessness. He might have been different if she had forced him to learn a trade. He was her only son, the image of his father. Her sin lay in loving him with much zeal, but little knowledge. There on the mantel stood the bottle of ammonia with which she had cleaned his trousers only the day before. Who would clean his trousers now? she wondered. And when the buttons came off his clothes who would sew them on? She had noticed for some time past that Roger was uneasy. The instincts of manhood were striving within him. He had tried to secure a situation, but had failed for want of an education in a specific line. Then he had become moody and despondent. She had detected the odor of alcohol on his breath and had reproved him gently, she thought. Perhaps she had been unkind. She had not meant to be. God, the all merciful, only knew the sacrifices she had made for her boy's comfort. A tear ran down her face into her mouth. It tasted bitter like aloes. She slid erect, like a bag of meal, to the floor. Burying her face in her hands, she tried to pray. Brokenly, incoherently, but aglow with the sanctity of maternal love, her prayer flew upward full of sighs and heavy with the weight of her despair. The fire went out. The water in the washtub grew cold. It was 9 o'clock in the morning when she knelt to pray. When she arose, wan eyed and trembling, night had come.

* * * * * * *

For a month the newsboys spoke of Mrs. Williams as "great graft." She bought all the papers they brought her. Late into the night she sat up reading every line relating to the war. Each line about the Seventy-first regiment she read over and over again. Twice she received cheery letters from Roger, the last one containing a money order for his first month's pay. He apologized for keeping $2 and went into a pitiful explanation of the things he had bought with the money, the account including needles and thread with which to sew on his buttons. It was the first money he had ever earned, and his mother knew the supreme satisfaction which it afforded him to send it to her. She did not send it back, being aware that its return would pain him.

It was not until the regiment left Tampa for Santiago that the idea of joining her boy in Cuba came to her. But when the idea had found a lodgment in her brain it never left her. Day and night she brooded over it. Once her hopes were raised high by the thought that she might become a Red Cross nurse, only to be crushed when she learned that experienced nurses only were accepted. For several days she was depressed. Then it occurred to her that she might disguise herself as a man and attain some menial employment on one of the vessels which would enable her to reach her son. Early the next morning she went to a costumer's shop. By the payment of $3 she was instructed in all the arts necessary to transform herself into a man.

That night she laughed for the first time since Roger had left her. She was standing before a mirror in her rooms clothed in a cast off suit of her boy's. Upon her head was perched a slouch hat well drawn down over her eyes. Her hands and face were stained a brown color from a preparation which the costumer had given her. She had cut off her hair close up to the roots. She laid the long, black tresses carefully away in the bureau drawer. Parading up and down before the mirror a little of her native coquetry awoke, and she laughed softly as she thought:

"He'll never know me!"

When she stepped out upon the sidewalk on the following morning, carrying a large hand bag, she glanced nervously up and down the street, expecting to be recognized. But no one paid her any attention, and in a little while her fears passed away, and she felt secure in her disguise.

* * * * * * *

It was the evening before the assault on the earthworks at Santiago. The tropical night air was heavy with miasmatic dew, and the heavens gleamed with a million jewel stars. Plodding wearily along over a narrow wagon road, famished with hunger and reeling with weakness, was Mrs. Williams, still wearing her disguise. The terrors of that night recurred to her afterward as a nightmare. The rain had filled the narrow road with water, in which she sank up to her knees only to flounder out into a sandy loam where every step was a torture. Frightened almost into a fainting condition by enormous land crabs, whose rapid movements in the grass sounded in her affrighted ears like the rattle of musketry, she at last fell in the underbrush utterly exhausted.

Then came the daybreak over the hills, the sun throwing out her lances of gold as if to guide her faltering footsteps. New vigor was infused into her fainting heart by the sound of a bugle over the ridge in front of her. Her heart leaped in her bosom as she heard the neighing of a horse. At last her search was over. She would soon be in the arms of her boy! She was near the camp. A faint hurrah, mellowed by the distance, reached her ears. This was followed by the boom of artillery, and the earth trembled. The sharp "zip" of a bullet caused her to look up as a small tree branch fell at her feet. Still she pressed on until as she mounted an elevation the whole panorama of war burst upon her sight. In the distance she could see the roofs of the houses in Santiago. Between were rifle pits vomiting flame. On her right she heard a cheer, and out of the grass there sprang a legion of men, who charged up a long, green slope.

"What regiment is that?" she asked, passing forward, of a soldier who lay in the grass with a broken leg.

"The Seventy-first," he replied. "They're charging San Juan. You fool, lie down! Do you want a hole through your head?"

She did not wait to hear the warning, but ran toward the slope. Her only fear was that she might be too late to save her boy. She did not know how she could serve him even if in all that ruck she could find him. Still forward she went. Now she was among the soldiers charging up the slope. She felt none of the thrill of battle which inspired her comrades; but, eager eyed, expectant, she watched for the one face in which lay for her the sum of human hope and happiness. Men fell all around her. She bent over to look at their faces and passed on. At last she found him near the crest of the hill lying on his face in the grass. She did not recognize him until she had turned him over upon his back. There was a crimson spot upon his shirt front. She ripped open the shirt and found a bullet hole in his right breast. She was strangely calm. Taking his sunny head in her lap, unmindful of the rain of lead all about her, she whispered:

"Roger, my boy, open your eyes! It's your mother! Don't you know me?"

But the shock of the bullet, the heat and excitement had made Roger partially unconscious. He moaned feebly and muttered:

"Water! Water!"

The heat was frightful. It beat down upon the battlefield like the stroke of a flail upon a barn floor. Mrs. Williams looked around helplessly. Seeing no succor in sight, she took her boy in her strong arms and partly dragged, partly carried, him down the long hill, the target for a hundred bullets. By a miracle she escaped injury. The surgeon examined Roger's wound as he lay in the improvised hospital, but shook his head when Mrs. Williams looked at him inquiringly. The bullet had traversed the lung, he said, and he could hold out no hope. Meanwhile Roger was delirious. He babbled in his unconsciousness about childish things and sang snatches of song about how mother kissed him in his dreams. Then followed 24 hours of fever, during which his mother never left his side. There was no luxury procurable which Mrs. Williams did not get for her boy, but he could not eat. But to the surprise of the surgeons Roger began to get stronger, and on the fourth day he opened his eyes a sane man. His mother had preserved her disguise all through this trying season. Reason had returned to Roger in the afternoon of an insufferably hot day. His mother, exhausted by her long vigil, had fallen asleep sitting on a stool by the side of his cot. Her head was buried in the coarse pillow so that he could not see her face, but the back of her waistcoat was exposed, showing a peculiar patch which he remembered to have seen before. Then he fell asleep, and when he awoke it was night. In the gloom of the tent he noticed the form of a man sitting by his bedside.

"Old chap," he murmured, "are you one of the nurses?"

"Yes," was the husky reply.

"Ah," said Roger, peering through the gloom of the tent, "it seems to me I have heard your voice before. But never mind; I want you to do me a favor. I may never get away from here alive. If I should die, I wish you would write to Mrs. Roger Williams, 242 Rivington street, New York. I was never of much use to her, and I ran away from her to come here. Break the news to her gently because she was very fond of me."

BY A MIRACLE SHE ESCAPED INJURY.

Here a tear fell on his hand. Roger thought there was a leak in the roof. He resumed:

"Tell her I wanted to be a man among men, and"—

A hospital attendant came into the tent with a lantern in his hand. Its rays fell across the face bending above the cot. Roger, glancing upward, saw a pallid face, worn and wasted with night vigils, from which the copious tears of joy had washed the costumer's coloring. He felt the tender caress of familiar calloused fingers in his tousled brown curls and heard the gently protesting voice of his mother say:

"Hush, hush, my child! The surgeon says you are out of danger."

When Roger fell asleep half an hour later, his lashes were wet with the tears of a joyous reunion, while there rested upon his mother's face that look of infinite serenity which only those who have come up out of deep tribulation can ever wear.

A Tall Corn Story.

A Pennsylvania man traveling through Kansas recently heard a great many tall corn stories and thought he would tell some of them in a letter home. This was how he did it:

"Most of the streets are paved, the grains of corn being used for cobblestones, while the cobs are hollowed out and used for sewer pipe. The husk when taken off whole and stood on end makes a nice tent for the children to play in. It sounds queer to hear the feedman tell the driver to take a dozen grains of horse feed over to Jackson's livery stable. If it were not for soft, deep soil here, I don't see how they ever could harvest the corn, as the stalks would grow up in the air as high as a church steeple. However, when the ears get too heavy their weight presses the stalk down in the ground on an average of 92 feet. This brings the ear near enough to the ground to be chopped off with an ax."

Lent Growing Shorter.

"It is a pity that religious scruples should be allowed to interfere with business," said a New York theatrical manager. "But they still do a little. The theater was only two-thirds full Wednesday night. However, it might be worse. Look at it now. Every seat full. You wouldn't know it was Lent at all, would you? The fact is there are only two days in Lent now anyway—Ash Wednesday and Good Friday. There used to be 40, and now there are two. Oh, it's improving! After awhile it won't make any difference to the theaters at all."

The Up-to-Date Maud Muller.

Maud Muller, on a summer's day,
Called "Number, please?" to earn her pay.
Before her, numbers, printed small,
Fell down when any one would call.

The judge took down his office 'phone,
And made to Maud his wishes known.
Said he, 'I'll ask you, just once more,
For four-eleven-forty-four."

Said Maud, as mild as summer seas,
"What number did you ask for, please?"
Said he, "I told you twice before,
It's four-eleven-forty-four."

Said Maud, and you could hear her smile,
"Just hold the 'phone a little while."
A weary interval ensued,
The wire humming an interlude.

And broken bits of talk came o'er
The 'phone, and made the waiter sore.
The wishbone-shaped receiver hook
He seized upon and wildly shook.

Till Maudie's voice he heard once more
"What number are you waiting for?"
The judge responded with a roar,
"It's four-eleven-forty-four."

Serenely Maud made answer then,
"That line is busy; call again."
The judge had business late that day,
And so he merely walked away.

But as he walked he shook his head,
And this is what he sadly said.
"Of all the words of tongue or pen,
The d——est are 'Busy; call again."

Made a Good Impression.

W. Harrison Walker Esq., of this place, was the Memorial Day orator at Philipsburg and the citizens of that place seem to have been highly pleased by his efforts. From the Philipsburg Journal we quote as follows:

The oration was delivered by W. Harrison Walker, Esq., of the popular law firm of Fortney & Walker, Bellefonte. Mr. Walker had in the morning accompanied a detachment of the Sons of Veterans to Kylertown, where he delivered an address that is said to have made a most favorable impression. His appearance here suggests the fact that he is the youngest man ever invited by John W. Geary Post to deliver the Memorial address, but those who were fortunate enough to hear him agree unanimously that the old veterans made no mistake in their selection. The address delighted everybody, and its able character and the eloquent manner in which it was delivered would have done honor to many older and distinguished speakers. The old soldiers seemed particularly pleased, and well they ought, as he paid glowing tributes to the dead and living heroes.

Referring to the Soldiers Monument to be erected at Bellefonte, he said in substance:

"It is in full harmony with the day and the occasion to express our gratification over the fact that Centre county, whose people were always loyal, brave and patriotic, is now engaged in the laudable effort to build to the memory of the many brave men who suffered, sacrificed and died that the Union might live, a lasting and enduring memorial at the county seat.

"Let the people of this county erect an everlasting memorial to the men who in their country's peril and the great hour of need forsook all that was near and dear and gave all they had, even life itself, so that the government of the people might not perish from the face of the earth, that hereafter, to the latest generations, when the children shall ask, What means this memorial? they shall be told that it is in memory of those from Centre county who joined the greatest and bravest armies in the world and suffered even unto death for the preservation of the Union and the government under which they live.

A Painful Injury.

Mrs. Joseph Ross, of Pleasant Gap, Centre County met with a peculiar accident a few days ago and received painful injuries. The Reporter says she went to the barn yard to do the milking. As she was passing a calf it switched its tail, and the tail caught in the handle of the milk bucket. The bucket was violently jerked and the hook on the bucket handle caught in the palm of Mrs. Ross' hand. The calf started to run and dragged Mrs. Ross for a distance of nearly two hundred feet before the wire tore out of the flesh. Her hand was terribly lacerated from the fleshy part of the thumb out to the end of the middle finger. The wire tore through the flesh and made a painful gash.

A Sudden Death.

Thomas Gentzel, a farmer living about one mile from Millheim, died very suddenly early Wednesday May 30. Mr. Gentzel was in his usual good health on Tuesday, and went to bed in the evening feeling quite good. Early in the morning his wife was awakened by his peculiar breathing and tried to help him to a sitting position in bed. She was unable to so and went for assistance. When they returned Mr. Gentzel was dead. Death was supposed to have been caused by heart trouble. He was aged over fifty years, and leaves a family of a wife and several children.

The profit of a gold mine depends, not on the amount of rock crushed under the stamps but upon the amount of gold which can be extracted from the rock. In a similar way the value of the food which is eaten does not depend on the quantity which is taken into the stomach but upon the amount of nourishment extracted from it by the organs of nutrition and digestion. When these organs are diseased they fail to extract the nourishment in sufficient quantities to supply the needs of the several organs of the body, and these organs cannot work without nourishment. The result is heart "trouble," liver "trouble," and many another ailment. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, acting on every organ of the digestive and nutritive system, restores it to health and vigor. It cures diseases remote from the stomach through the stomach in which they originated. "Golden Medical Discovery contains neither alcohol nor narcotics.

Fingers Almost Amputated.

The amount of the crookedness is upwards of $1200. Now let the impudent Herald paper be injured in its business, blackmailed, and by all other dire things—for what business have newspapers to expose dishonest town officials?

In an article in the New England Monthly, the writer has this truthful paragraph: It is a singular fact that those persons who are continually finding fault with the living profits of their neighbor, are invariably found to be far greater extortioners in their own business affairs, yea, even dishonest and will swindle if possible. They want to live and not let live, the lowest stage of meanness and jealousy to which a man can descend.

Glorious News.

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Bicycle Stolen.

Charles Cruse, the tobacco dealer is bemoaning the loss of his bicycle which some miscreant stole from in front of his store sometime Thursday evening. Charlie's home is now at Axe Mann and the loss of his wheel is a great inconvenience to him as he is now compelled to walk the distance from his home to his store.

The missing wheel is a "Baron" made by the Featherstone people. It has a dark red frame, new back tire and the front tire had several plugs in it. In front of the wheel there was a place for hanging a lantern, and a strap was wound around the handle bars. Anyone seeing a wheel answering this description will confer a great favor on Charlie Cruse by communicating with him.

A Check for $17,000,000.

The largest check that ever went through the New York Clearing House was collected through that institution a few days ago. It was for $17,000,000 and was drawn by Kuhn, Loeb & Co., in part payment for $35,000,000 worth of four per cent Third avenue Railroad bonds, in favor of the Morton Trust Company, which represents the new owners of the road.

FRIDAY NIGHT'S STORM.

House Occupied by Benner Graham on Quaker Hill Struck by Lightning.

Friday evening about 8 o'clock a heavy thunder storm burst over the town causing considerable damage. The rain fell in torrents and the lightning flashed and thunder roared terrifically.

While it was at its height the lightning struck the residence occupied by Benner Graham on Quaker Hill and set it on fire. The alarm was sounded but before the fire companies reached the scene the fire had been put out. The house was considerably damaged however.

The lightning also struck a telephone pole on Decatuer street. The telephone companies were put to considerable trouble and expense by the work of the storm.

All About the Halls.

An intelligent and highly cultured gentleman, recently located in the county, says the Centre Hall Reporter asks why so many places had the affix of "hall" to their names, whether in honor of some prominent family. No, there was no family of such prominence. Nittany Hall was among the first to be thus baptized, and away back became a pleasant, popular social centre. As other localities grew into existence needing a "habitation and a name," it was taken for granted that by tacking "hall" to the tail end, brought with it all that was giving Nittany Hall a local reputation. Hence originated the craze, giving us Mill Hall, Coverly Hall, Centre Hall, Linden Hall, Oak Hall, Pine Hall and some other halls. Those "halls" not yet out of their teens, had better begin to lop off their terminals so as to avoid making confusion worse confounded.

"Hall" used to be added to the names of popular hostelries as significant of spaciousness.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrah, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A New Hardware Store for Centre Hall.

Centre Hall is to have a new firm starting in business in a short time. Daniel Irwin's sons, of Bellefonte, composed of L. C. and E. P. Irwin, intend opening a large store in the foundry building, and will carry a big stock of hardware, including carriage and wagon makers supplies. The firm is a hustling one, and their project has met with splendid encouragement from all citizens. The store will open in June, just as quickly as the necessary improvements can be made to the room in the shape of remodeling the entire first floor and the addition of plate glass show windows and changing the entrance.—Centre Hall Reporter.

Took Her Measure.

A philanthropic woman of Pacific Heights, one of the sort of superior slum-raisers shown up in "Fables in Slang," met on one of her tours a little boy who was swearing roundly over a game of marbles. She seized him at once and gave him a good shaking, adding: "You ought to be ashamed of yourself! I never heard such language since the day I was born!" The boy, into whose desolate home she had just been bringing light, pulled himself loose. "Yes'm," he said, "I 'spose dere was a good deal o' cussin' de day you was born."

It isn't the bodily sickness that hurts a man. He could stand that fairly well if his mind were easy. But Americans are busy. They have work to do—plans to make—schemes to execute. They are "plungers." They line up their incomes as soon as they receive them or re-invest them with the idea of increase. They cannot afford to be sick. Sickness is a calamity—a financial calamity as well as a physical one. So the sick man worries, and the more he worries, the sicker he grows.

Worry is a good thing at the right time. The minute you feel a symptom of sickness—worry about it—do something about it—cure yourself. When you begin to feel run-down—when a twinge of rheumatism tells you plainly that your blood is impaired—when you are losing flesh and vitality, go to the nearest drug store and get a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is the greatest blood purifier and tissue builder on earth. It cures rheumatism and all other blood diseases by curing the cause. It purifies the blood and puts the blood making organs into good, healthy, working order. It tones up the stomach, stirs up the liver, helps the kidneys in their work and puts suffering nerves at rest. It contains no whisky, alcohol, opium or other dangerous drugs and does not, therefore, create a craving for stimulants or narcotics.

James H. Crampton, Esq., of Sharpsburg, Washington Co., Md., writes: "I was in business in Baltimore, and had rheumatism for three months; couldn't walk at all. I tried the best doctors I could get but they did me no good. I took three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it cured me sound. I came home to Sharpsburg and there were three cases of different diseases. I advised the patients to use Dr. Pierce's medicine, which they did, and all were cured. I have sold over one hundred dollars' worth of your medicine by telling people how it cured me. You can write to our druggist, Mr. G. F. Smith, in our town and he will tell you what I did for you in regard to selling and advertising your great remedies."

WAS IT MURDER OR SUICIDE?

The Body of Jack Harbaugh of Coburn Found in the River at Clearfield.

Clearfield, June 1.—The body of a man who has been recognized as Jack Harbaugh, of Coburn Centre County, was found in the river here this afternoon. The discovery was made by James Condon. He found the body about fifteen feet from the shore near the dam.

Harbaugh was employed by the Surveyor Run Lumber Company on their mill at Surveyor Run, and came to town last Saturday. He was again seen on Monday morning in the vicinity of the Beech Creek railroad station. He was a man between 54 and 55 years of age and had acquaintances here.

Two theories have been advanced regarding the manner of his death. Those who know him say that he was not a man who would commit suicide and they hint strongly of foul play. What grounds they have for their suspicions does not appear. The District Attorney has ordered an investigation into the case and an inquest will be held.

FOURTH OF JULY.

Undines Preparing for a Big Time at Hecla Park.

The Undine Fire Company will hold their annual picnic at Hecla Park this year on the Fourth of July.

As an amusement the Undines will present "The Spanish War," a monster music and military spectacle by the Repasz band of Williamsport.

The spectacle was presented at Williamsport last July and in commenting on it the Penna. Grit had this to say:

The performance of "The Spanish War" at Athletic park last Tuesday evening added greatly to the reputation of the Repasz band.

The performance was in reality the first complete rehearsal of the spectacle, because it was simply impossible to get the 1,000 participants together in any hall which the city affords. The military companies, the civic companies, the Demorest band and the S. O. V. drum corps promptly performed all the parts assigned them, and the batteries and fire works came in on proper time. At the climax, when cannons were roaring muskets volleying, soldiers cheering, and bands playing, the excitement of the big audience ran high. It was "just like war."

The work of the band itself was most commendable both in the preceding concert and in the "Spanish War" itself. The concert program comprised selections both classical and popular, which were greeted with applause. The chief performance of the band, however, was the musical spectacle into which it put most commendable work and thoroughly delighted the thousands of spectators. The old Repasz never played better nor created greater enthusiasm. Mention must be made of the good chorus assisting, the singing section of the Gesang Verein Harmonia, whose rendition of "Home, Sweet Home," out on the battlefield, was most artistic, and the quartet that received repeated encores.

All in all, "The Spanish War" was a monster entertainment, and an undertaking far exceeding the expectations the public had a right to anticipate.

FIRE AT BUSH'S HOLLOW.

Henry Bush Saves His Wife from a Horrible Death.

Early Tuesday morning the residence of Henry Bush in Bush's Hollow, was totally destroyed by fire. The fire is supposed to have caught from an overheated stove. Mr. Bush had just built his kitchen fire and had gone out to feed his stock and on his return found his house in flames. He instantly thought of his aged wife whom he had left asleep in bed. The fire had so far advanced that no one would venture in but Mr. Bush, although 70 years of age himself, frantic at the thought of his wife being burned up, rushed to the door and exclaiming: "If she burns I will burn with her" disappeared thought the flames. He found his wife still asleep but brought her to safety although both were badly burned.

The house which was a new one only built last summer, and the old house which stood, near it, were both totally destroyed with all their contents.

There was no insurance on either the house or its contents so that the loss will be irretrievable.

Mrs. Ida M. Dolan Dead.

The death of Mrs. Ida M. Dolan, of this place, which occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Keithly in Scottdale, Westmoreland county, on Wednesday, May 30, was very sudden and unexpected. She left here two weeks ago to visit her daughter apparently in the best of health. She was taken ill with erysipelas and her daughter, Mrs. O. C. Miller of this place, was telegraphed for on Wednesday, but before she reached Scottdale her mother was dead. Her remains were brought to this place and the funeral took place Saturday at 2:30 p. m. Services were conducted by Rev. Shriner of the Methodist church.

Deceased whose maiden name was Reeder was about seventy-one years of age. She was the widow of Martin Dolan who kept hotel at Milesburg for many years. Mrs Dolan has been keeping a boarding house near the Glass Works for several years past,

She leaves to mourn her loss five children: Martin, whose present whereabout is unknown; William in Texas; George and Mrs. O. C. Miller of this place, and Ada, wife of Thomas Keithley, of Scottdale.

The Empire Furnace Shut Down.

The Empire Iron furnace which has been in operation at this place for a year past closed down Saturday throwing several hundred men out of employment. When it will resume again seems to be a mystery and all that can be learned is that orders have been received from the main office at New York ordering the furnace to be blown out and such will be done at once or as soon as the present supply of ore is used up.

At first it was stated that the furnace was to be shut down for repairs but from observation on the ground it does not look as if any repairs were contemplated.

The Mattern ore banks up Buffalo Run which were furnishing part of the ore for this furnace will be compelled also to close down this week. This however is said to be only temporary. About thirty-five men will thus be thrown out of employment at that point.

MRS. WILLIAM H. GARMAN.

Death Enters a Bellefonte Home and Takes Hence the Spirit of a Young Wife and Mother.

Death at any time is a sad blow to the afflicted friends but especially is it so when the departed is just on the threshhold of a happy and useful life. For several days past Mrs. Garman, wife of mailing clerk, William H. Garman, has been lying in a semi-conscious condition at her home on East Linn street.

Last Thursday her illness began and the doctors at first were puzzled as to exactly what her disease was. At a consultation of physicians it was decided that she was suffering from brain fever and heart trouble combined. Everything possible to medical skill was done for the afflicted woman but it was of no avail for at 1:05 Tuesday morning the spirit of the loving young wife and mother wended its way "to that bourne from whence no traveler ere returns."

Mrs Garman, whose maiden name was May Savage, was the daughter of John and Celista Savage, of Southington, Conn., where she was born May 4th 1867. Her age at time of death was therefore, 33 years 1 month and 1 day. Both her parents are dead, her father at one time being a prominent iron manufacturer and inventor of Southington, Conn. Deceased came to Bellefonte in 1890. Nine years ago she was married in New York City to William H. Garman, son of Daniel Garman, of this place. The husband and three little children, Ruth, Robert and John, the last named only six months old survive to mourn the loss of this kind and loving mother.

Mrs. Garman was a member of St. John's Protestant Episcopal church having been confirmed in 1897. She was also one of the leaders in the Society of "The King's Daughters." She was a woman of charming manner and kindly christian ways, of whom it can be truly said, she had not an enemy among all her large circle of friends and acquaintances.

The sorrowing husband and little children certainly have the sincere sympathy of the whole community in this their hour of sad bereavement, and we can only bid them look to him "who doeth all things well" and who will in his own good time bring the loved ones together again in that home on high where there shall be no parting.

The funeral will take place this afternoon from the house. Services will be conducted by Rev. George Israel Brown. Interment in the Union cemetery.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES.

The Democratic primaries to choose delegates to the county convention which met here Tuesday were held throughout the county Saturday. Robert M. Foster, of State College, who has made one of the best representatives Centre has had in the Legislature for many years asked for a third term. As a result a most bitter fight was made against him on the ground of the third term bug-a-boo. His excellent record counted for nix with the unterrified. The other candidates were Henry Wetzel, of Bellefonte, (one of the present members from this county), J. Will Kepler, of Ferguson township, and John W. Conley, of Potter township.

STRUCK BY A ROLLING STONE.

Supt. Samuel Sheffer Sustains Serious Injuries at Armor Gap Quarries.

Samuel Sheffer, superintendent of A. G. Morris' quarries at this place, was seriously injured Tuesday about 9:30 a. m., while overseeing some work in the quarry at Armor's Gap. The men were just preparing for a blast when suddenly a large stone above them became loose and rolled down striking Mr. Sheffer and knocking him down a twenty foot embankment. At first it was feared that Mr. Sheffer was killed but an examination showed there was still life. He was taken to his home on East Curtin street and medical attendance was summoned in the person of Dr. Geo. F. Harris. An examination showed that the unfortunate man had two ribs broken on the left side, left shoulder out of place, left arm broken at the elbow and right leg broken.

A telephone message from Dr. Harris states that Mr. Sheffer is resting as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

CENTENNIAL SPEAKERS.

Charles Emory Smith and District Attorney James M. Beck to be the Orators.

The committee on entertainment and speakers for the Centre County Centennial, July 25 and 26, take pleasure in announcing that they have secured Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith and Hon. James M. Beck, United States district attorney, both of Philadelphia, as the orators for this important occasion.

This committee is to be congratulated on securing these two men as they are undoubtedly recognized as the two most foremost platform orators of the day. There is no doubt that this will do more to make the centennial a success than anything so far done. Keep the good work up gentlemen and the coming centennial will be one of the grandest events ever held in Centre County.

A Deplorable Feature of Our Legal Holidays.

A conspicuous and deplorable feature of Memorial Day in Bellefonte was the appearance on our streets of so many men, young and old, staggering beneath the burden of an excessive indulgence in malt and spiritous liquors. There were no disturbances or commotions to mar the peace and pleasures of the day, only a painful and distressing exhibition of the hoggish propensities of men who seemingly have no respect for themselves, their families or the community in which they reside.

What misery, what shame, what humiliation must fall to the lot of those whom family ties unite with men who publicly debauch themselves upon holiday occasions. Were these creatures of self debasement the only ones to suffer their moral obliquity would be of slight consequence but there are others who must share the reproach and odium of their disgrace and to these common sympathy goes out. What a boon it would be to every town and community if the sale of intoxicants was prohibited on every holiday legalized by statue of law. There would be less heartache, less misery, more pleasure and more enjoyment than is possible under the present conditions of our license system.
